REPORT OF THE DELEGATES OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TO THE SIXTH INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE OF AMERICAN STATES

Held at Habana, Cuba, January 16 to February 20, 1928

WASHINGTON, March 31, 1928.

THE HONORABLE FRANK B. KELLOGG,

Secretary of State.

SIR: The undersigned, appointed by the President as delegates of the United States of America to the Sixth International Conference of American States, held at Habana, Cuba, from January 16 to February 20, 1928, inclusive, have the honor to submit the following report:

Most of the delegates (whose names will be found in Appendix 4 of this report) proceeded to Habana on the presidential train which left Washington, Friday, January 13, at 2 p. m. Mr. Morrow came to Habana from Mexico City and Mr. Underwood and Mr. Rowe arrived at Habana some time before the other delegates.

The decision of the President of the United States to address the Conference made the formal opening session an event of world-wide interest. The President's arrival at Habana on Sunday, January 15, accompanied by Mrs. Coolidge, the Secretary of State, the Secretary of the Navy, the Secretary to the President, and most of the members of the delegation of the United States, was the occasion of a great popular demonstration.

On the morning of January 16 the delegates to the Conference assembled at the National Theater situated in the Parque Central of Habana, and were addressed by His Excellency, the President of Cuba, General Gerardo Machado, and by the President of the United States. The texts of these addresses will be found in Appendix 2. Both addresses were distinguished not only by their appropriateness and eloquence, but by the spirit of friendliness and the earnest desire for mutually helpful cooperation which permeated them. The visit of President Coolidge made a profound impression and cannot fail to be of lasting benefit in our relations both to the Cuban people and to all the nations of Latin America.

It is a notable fact that on this occasion, for the first time in the history of the Pan American Conferences, delegations from every republic of the American Continent were in attendance. A full list of the delegations will be found in Appendix 4.

On Wednesday, January 18, a session of the Conference for the purpose of formal organization was held in the Great Hall of the University of Habana. At this session the Secretary of State of Cuba, Mr. Rafael Martínez Ortiz, delivered an address of welcome to which reply was made on behalf of the delegates by Mr. Alejandro Lira, chairman of the Chilean delegation. These addresses appear in Appendix 3.

The Secretary General of the Conference then announced that the Conference would proceed with the election of a permanent President. Mr. Francisco Peynado, chairman of the delegation of the Dominican Republic, nominated Mr. Antonio Sánchez de Bustamante, chairman of the Cuban delegation. This nomination was seconded by Mr. Ricardo Gutiérrez Lee, delegate from Colombia, and Mr. Gustavo Guerrero, chairman of the delegation of El Salvador.

On taking the chair, Mr. Bustamante delivered an address, the text of which will be found in Appendix 3.

The President of the Conference then announced that the next business would be the appointment of a Committee on Credentials and proposed that this committee be made up as follows: Mr. Raúl Fernandes, of Brazil; Mr. Juan José Amézaga, of Uruguay; and Mr. Santiago Key Ayala, of Venezuela.

The Conference then proceeded, in accordance with the provision of Article 2 of the regulations, to determine by lot the seating arrangements for delegations in the hall of the Conference. As a result of the drawing the order was established as follows: Perú, Uruguay, Panamá, Ecuador, Mexico, El Salvador, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Bolivia, Venezuela, Colombia, Honduras, Costa Rica, Chile, Brazil, Argentina, Paraguay, Haiti, Dominican Republic, United States of America, and Cuba.

The chairman of the Peruvian delegation thereupon proposed votes of thanks and congratulations to the President of the United States and to the President of Cuba for their addresses at the opening session, the texts of which will be found in Appendices 79 and 80. The chairman of the Uruguayan delegation, Mr. J. Varela, followed with a vote of salutation to the University of Habana, the buildings of which were being used by the Conference, and at the same time requested the Conference to approve a motion inviting the members of the various faculties of the University to attend the sessions of the Conference. This motion was unanimously approved after being seconded by Mr. Enrique Olaya, of Colombia.

Mr. José Antezana, delegate of Bolivia, then proposed a tribute to the memory of Woodrow Wilson, which was unanimously adopted. The text of this tribute will be found in Appendix 82.

The Secretary General of the Conference then read a number of cablegrams of congratulation, after which the President of the Conference stated that the time had come for the organization of committees. He announced that, in accordance with the precedents established at previous conferences, a committee composed of the chairman of each delegation would be formed, to be known as the Committee on Initiatives, and that the following additional committees would be organized: 1. Pan American Union; 2. Public International Law and Frontier Police; 3. Private International Law and Uniform Legislation; 4. Problems of Communications; 5. Intellectual Cooperation; 6. Economic Problems; 7. Social Problems; 8. Reports on Treaties, Conventions, and Resolutions. The President of the Conference requested the respective delegations to indicate the distribution of their members on the above-mentioned committees. The chairman of the delegation of the United States of America, Mr. Hughes, proposed that the President of the Conference, Mr. Bustamante, be declared member ex officio of all committees. This motion was unanimously adopted.

Mr. Aristides Agüero, member of the Cuban delegation, proposed a tribute to Dr. Guillermo A. Sherwell, which was unanimously adopted. The chairman of the delegation of the United States, Mr. Hughes, in a brief address expressed appreciation for the tributes rendered to the memory of Woodrow Wilson and Guillermo A. Sherwell.

Soon after the opening session the various committees proceeded to the election of their respective chairmen and vice chairmen, as well as the selection of their reporting delegates, known as ponentes. The plan adopted was to appoint a general ponente for all the subjects entrusted to each committee and then to appoint special reporting delegates for each individual subject. This procedure was adopted by all committees except the Committee on Public International Law, which appointed a series of special reporting delegates, but no general ponente. The main duty of the general reporting delegate in such cases was to prepare a report for the plenary session of the Conference which would include the action taken by the committee on all the subjects within its jurisdiction.

The general results of the Conference can be best set forth in describing the work done by each of the committees.

COMMITTEE ON THE PAN AMERICAN UNION

(No. 1)

The Committee on the Pan American Union, on which the United States was represented by Mr. Hughes, Mr. Fletcher, and Mr. Rowe, dealt with the single topic contained in Article I of the program, reading as follows:

Organization of the Pan American Union on the basis of a convention prepared by the Governing Board of the Pan American Union, in accordance with the resolution adopted by the Fifth International Conference of American States on May 1, 1923.

At the first meeting of the committee, Mr. Antonio Sánchez de Bustamante, President of the Conference, presiding, Mr. Enrique Olaya Herrera (Colombia) was elected chairman of the committee, and Mr. Lisandro Díaz León (Paraguay) vice chairman. At the same meeting Mr. J. Varela Acevedo (Uruguay) was designated as reporting delegate (ponente).

As a basis of discussion, the committee had before it a project of convention on the organization of the Pan American Union, formulated by the Governing Board of the Union pursuant to the resolution adopted at the Fifth Conference. In submitting this project, the reporting delegate proposed a number of minor modifications, including the addition of the library of the Pan American Union in the list of sections to be established in the Union, and changes in the wording of certain articles.

Two comprehensive proposals containing amendments to the project submitted by the reporting delegate were introduced at the beginning of the sessions by the delegation of Mexico and the delegation of Cuba.

The majority of the amendments proposed by the delegation of Cuba represented a redrafting of certain articles contained in the project formulated by the Governing Board, although two changes of a substantial character were proposed; namely, the insertion in the list of divisions to be established at the Pan American Union of a Section on Labor and a Section on Inter-American Conciliation. In view of the subsequent action of the committee in leaving to the Governing Board the determination of the internal organization of the Union, the proposals of the delegation of Cuba did not figure in the discussions to any considerable extent.

The amendments proposed by the delegation of Mexico were of a more fundamental nature, and represented material changes in the existing organization of the Union. These proposed changes were as follows:

1. That the Governing Board of the Pan American Union be composed of the representatives that the Governments of the American Republics might wish to appoint.

2. That the office of Chairman and Vice Chairman rotate annually among the representatives on the Board, in the alphabetical order of the respective countries.

3. That the office of Director General be renewed annually, each of the Chairmen of the Pan American Committees in the respective countries occupying the post in turn, in the alphabetical order provided for in the selection of Chairman of the Governing Board; and that the Director General shall not accept from the Government of any country other offices or commissions than those of a purely educational nature.

4. A specific declaration that the Pan American Union shall not exercise functions of a political character.

In the general discussion that preceded the detailed consideration of the articles of the project, the delegation of the United States declared that any plan of organization that might be agreeable to the delegations of the other Republics would be entirely acceptable to the Government of the United States; that this Government had no desire that it should be given special privileges in the organization of the Union, that the Secretary of State did not wish for any position of prominence on the Governing Board; and that his only desire was to be considered a colleague and coworker of the other members of the Board in advancing the purposes for which the institution was established.

At the second session of the committee, the delegate of Argentina, Mr. Honorio Pueyrredón, reviewed the history of the Pan-American movement, declaring the economic unity of the republics as one of its principal bases, and concluding with the recommendation that the Governments take measures to reduce high customs barriers which hamper the freedom of inter-American commerce; that the obstacles to the freedom of circulation and participation in commerce of agricultural products be eliminated with respect to all those articles in which such elimination does not constitute a danger to the vital interests of the country and its workers; and that for the purpose of exercising the rights of sanitary police and plant quarantine, the signatory countries adopt an organic rule guaranteeing that the measures that might be taken shall in no case be of an arbitrary nature. He concluded by stating that unless such declarations were inserted in the convention on the Pan American Union, it was uncertain whether Argentina would be able to subscribe to a convention or agree to a resolution on the organization of the Union.

It was decided that declarations of principles should be incorporated in a preamble to precede the convention. Accordingly, the suggestions of the Argentine delegation, as well as other proposals submitted by various delegations, were referred to a subcommittee.

The subcommittee, after several lengthy meetings, submitted the following draft of preamble, which was accepted by the committee:

The American Republics, whose moral union rests on the juridical equality of the Republics of the continent and on the mutual respect of the rights inherent in their complete independence, desirous of promoting efficaciously the increasing conciliation of their economic interests and coordination of their social and intellectual activities, and recognizing that relations between peoples are regulated by law as well as by their legitimate individual and collective interests;

Agree to continue their joint action of cooperation and solidarity by means of periodic meetings of the International Conferences of American States, as well as by means of organs established by virtue of international agreements, and through the Pan American Union which has its seat in Washington and whose organization and functions shall be regulated by the present convention, in the following terms:

The delegate of Argentina, Mr. Pueyrredón, stated that this preamble was satisfactory as far as it went, but that it did not satisfy the aspirations of his country. He insisted upon the inclusion in the preamble of a statement to the effect that:

Economic cooperation being an essential factor in the realization of these purposes, the signatory states will direct their efforts towards the suppression of unjust obstacles and excessive artificial barriers which may hinder natural interchange or restrict the liberty of commerce between the nations of America, without according privileges or creating exclusions.

The subcommittee felt, however, and this was later concurred in by the full committee, that the preamble as proposed by the subcommittee was entirely adequate, and that the inclusion of the proposed provision, especially in the light of the purposes of its introduction, did not properly belong in a declaration of general principles or come within the scope of a preamble in the organization of an international institution such as the Pan American Union which was not to exercise functions of a political character. Mr. Pueyrredón thereupon declared that he would be unable to sign the convention formulated by the committee, nor would he be able to approve a project of resolution that did not contain the statement that he had proposed.

In taking up the articles of the convention, the committee considered in connection with Article 1 of the project (Article 3 of the definitive convention) the first Mexican amendment relating to the composition of the Board. The reasons advanced by the delegate of Mexico (Mr. Urbina) were that the Governments should be given the greatest possible liberty in the selection of their representatives on the Governing Board; and that the adoption of the Mexican amendment would serve to democratize the Pan American Union. He declared that the obligation to appoint diplomatic representatives to the Governing Board gave to the Pan American Union a political aspect which would be inconsistent with the organization of the Union if the Mexican proposal were adopted that the institution should not exercise functions of a political character; and urged that, while the adoption of the amendment would not prevent Governments from appointing their diplomatic representatives to serve on the Board, they should be given liberty of choice and should not be unduly restricted in making their selections. The committee accepted this proposal, but added a modification suggested by the delegate of Perú (Mr. Salazar) to the effect that the appointments to the Board may devolve upon the diplomatic representatives of the respective countries in Washington.

The Mexican proposal with respect to rotation in office of the Chairman and Vice Chairman of the Governing Board was not accepted by the committee. The members of the committee opposing this proposal declared that freedom of election was a fundamental principle of democratic institutions; that the present system of election of the Chairman and Vice Chairman had been eminently satisfactory, and that the members of the Board should be permitted to elect whomsoever they desired from among their number to preside over the deliberations of the Board. A subsequent motion of the Mexican delegation to reconsider the action taken on this proposal was rejected by the committee. The text of the article as adopted is as follows:

The government of the Pan American Union shall be vested in a Governing Board composed of the representatives that the American Governments may appoint. The appointment may devolve upon the diplomatic representatives of the respective countries in Washington.

Besides his own country, a member of the Governing Board may serve as special representative of one or more countries, in which case such representative shall have as many votes as countries represented.

The Board shall elect its Chairman and Vice Chairman annually.

The third important modification proposed by Mexico, relating to the annual change in the office of Director General, was withdrawn by the delegate of Mexico after a number of members of the committee had emphasized the advantages of permanency and continuity in the office of Director General.

The fourth proposal of the delegation of Mexico, relative to the exercise of political functions by the Pan American Union, was referred to the subcommittee appointed to formulate the preamble, which subcommittee was also entrusted with the preparation of an introductory paragraph for Article 6, relating to the functions of the Union. The report of the subcommittee was approved by the full committee and recommended that the introductory paragraph to Article 6 read as follows:

Both the Governing Board and the Pan American Union shall discharge the duties assigned by this convention subject to the condition that they shall not exercise functions of a political character.

In considering the articles relating to the functions and activities of the Pan American Union, it was the consensus of opinion among the members of the committee that the convention should establish only the fundamental bases of organization and that the details of internal order should be left to the determination of the Governing Board. It was accordingly decided materially to modify the project of convention that had been formulated by the Governing Board. The reporting delegate (Mr. Varela) thereupon submitted to the committee a revised draft which followed more or less the lines of the resolution on the Pan American Union adopted at the Fifth International Conference of American States. A number of modifications were, however, introduced into the present organization, providing:

1. That the instruments of ratification of the treaties, conventions, protocols and other diplomatic instruments signed at the International Conferences of American States shall be deposited at the Pan American Union, which shall communicate notice of the receipt of such ratification to the other states.

2. That, wherever possible, the Governing Board shall establish relations of close cooperation between the Pan American Union and other official Pan American organizations.

3. That the Governing Board fix the status of the members of the staff, determining their conditions of retirement.

4. That the member states may withdraw from the Pan American Union at any time, but shall pay their respective quotas for the period of the current fiscal year.

Article 14 provides that the convention shall become effective when all the states represented at the conference receive notice that all the ratifications have been deposited with the Pan American Union.

In addition to the convention, the Conference approved a resolution containing provisions relative to the organization of the Pan American Union that shall remain in effect pending the approval of the convention by all the Republics of the American Continent. This resolution puts into immediate effect the more important modifications contained in the convention, including the changes in the method of appointing members to the Governing Board; the declaration that neither the Governing Board nor the Pan American Union shall exercise functions of a political character; the provision relating to the determination of the conditions of retirement of the members of the staff; and the provision that the states, members of the Union, may withdraw from the organization at any time, but that they shall pay their respective quotas for the period of the current fiscal year.

The full text of the convention and resolution adopted by the Conference will be found in Appendices 16 and 17, respectively.

COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC INTERNATIONAL LAW AND FRONTIER POLICE

(No. 2)

The Second Committee, on Public International Law and Frontier Police, was organized with Mr. Gustavo Guerrero, of El Salvador, as chairman, and Mr. Raúl Fernandes, of Brazil, as vice chairman. The representatives of the delegation of the United States on this committee were Mr. Hughes, Mr. Fletcher, Mr. Underwood, and Mr. Scott.

There were assigned to this committee topics 1, 2, and 4 embraced within the second division of the program of the Conference dealing with "Matters of an inter-American juridical nature"; that is to say:

1. Consideration of the results of the Commission of Jurists which assembled at Rio de Janeiro for the purpose of undertaking the codification of international law;

2. Methods for the pacific settlement of international disputes;
and
4. Frontier police.

The results of the work of the Commission of Jurists had been set forth in twelve projects as follows:

- I. Fundamental bases of international law
- II. States: Existence—equality—recognition
- III. Status of aliens
- IV. Treaties
- V. Exchange of publications
- VI. Interchange of professors and students
- VII. Diplomatic agents
- VIII. Consuls
- IX. Maritime neutrality
- X. Asylum
- XI. Obligations of states in event of civil war
- XII. Pacific settlement of international conflicts

Projects V and VI, relating to "Exchange of publications" and "Interchange of professors and students," were referred to the Committee on Intellectual Cooperation.

In view of the variety of subjects before the Committee on Public International Law, several reporters were appointed as follows:

Project I, Fundamental bases of international law, and Project II, States: Existence—equality—recognition. Víctor M. Maúrtua, of Perú, reporter.

Project III, Status of aliens. James Brown Scott, of the United States of America, reporter.

Project IV, Treaties. Orestes Ferrara, of Cuba, reporter.

Project VII, Diplomatic agents, and Project VIII, Consuls. Ricardo Castro Beeche, of Costa Rica, reporter.

Project IX, Maritime neutrality. Juan José Amézaga, of Uruguay, reporter.

Project X, Asylum, and Project XI, Obligations of states in the event of civil war. Fernando González Roa, of Mexico, reporter.

Project XII, Pacific settlement of international disputes. Ricardo J. Alfaro, of Panamá, reporter.

Frontier police. Honorio Pueyrredón, of Argentina, reporter.

The conclusions reached by the committee will be best understood by presenting the subjects in the above-mentioned order although this order was not observed in the proceedings.

FIRST

Project I: Fundamental bases of international law

Project II: States: Existence—equality—recognition

Mr. Maúrtua's report was presented to the Committee on February 4. It proposed the substitution of the four following documents for the above-mentioned projects of the Commission of Jurists:

1. A declaration of the fundamental bases of the codification of international law.

2. A declaration of the definitions and rules of application of international law.
3. A recommendation on Pan American unity and solidarity.
4. A convention regarding recognition of governments.

In his oral presentation, Mr. Maúrtua stated that he would first deal with the fundamental principles which were set forth in the first division of his report. He then gave a brilliant exposition of the purposes of codification of international law, its appropriate method and limitations. He deemed it essential that the work of the formulation and development of the law of nations should be founded on unchangeable principles of respect for essential international rights, recognized by all the American Republics. Accordingly, he proposed, as the first document, a Declaration of the Rights and Duties of States. For this purpose he adopted, and presented without change, as the first division of his report, the declaration of the American Institute of International Law, which had been promulgated at its first session in Washington on January 6, 1916. This declaration is as follows:

I. Every nation has the right to exist, and to protect and to conserve its existence; but this right neither implies the right nor justifies the act of the state to protect itself or to conserve its existence by the commission of unlawful acts against innocent and unoffending states.

II. Every nation has the right to independence in the sense that it has a right to the pursuit of happiness and is free to develop itself without interference or control from other states, provided that in so doing it does not interfere with or violate the rights of other states.

III. Every nation is in law and before law the equal of every other nation belonging to the society of nations, and all nations have the right to claim and, according to the Declaration of Independence of the United States, "to assume, among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them."

IV. Every nation has the right to territory within defined boundaries and to exercise exclusive jurisdiction over its territory, and all persons whether native or foreign found therein.

V. Every nation entitled to a right by the law of nations is entitled to have that right respected and protected by all other nations, for right and duty are correlative, and the right of one is the duty of all to observe.

VI. International law is at one and the same time both national and international: national in the sense that it is the law of the land and applicable as such to the decision of all questions involving its principles; international in the sense that it is the law of the society of nations and applicable as such to all questions between and among the members of the society of nations involving its principles.

Mr. Maúrtua emphasized the great importance of this declaration which had received the approval of eminent jurists both of the American Republics and of Europe. He referred to the fact that the chairman of the delegation of the United States, when Secretary of State, had incorporated this declaration in an address on November 30, 1923, on the occasion of the celebration of the centenary of the Monroe Doctrine, stating that the declaration embodied fundamental principles which were supported by decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States. Mr. Maúrtua found no official declaration of rights so complete as this declaration of the American Institute and believed that if adopted by the Conference it would constitute a Magna Charta for the American Republics. Mr. Maúrtua urged his views in an address of great clarity and power. He asked leave to postpone, until this subject had been dealt with, the presentation of the other divisions of his report.

Mr. Hughes followed Mr. Maúrtua with an emphatic endorsement of the declaration which Mr. Maúrtua had proposed.

At the outset, when Mr. Maúrtua's report was presented, Mr. Guerrero had surrendered the chair to Mr. Fernandes. Immediately after Mr. Hughes's statement, Mr. Guerrero addressed the committee. He criticized Mr. Maúrtua's report, taking exception to the omission in his report of Article 3 of Project II of the Commission of Jurists that: "No state may intervene in the internal affairs of another." Mr. Guerrero insisted that this text should be taken as the basis of discussion in the committee.

There followed a general discussion which was continued in a later session of the same day. Many of the delegates addressed the committee, and without entering into a critical analysis of particular exigencies or attempting an exposition of international law, they voiced with eloquence the general principles of absolute sovereignty and independence.

A separate and concrete proposal was submitted by the delegate of Honduras. It should be observed that the delegation of Colombia had already proposed, in connection with the project of convention for the organization of the Pan American Union, that there should be a declaration of the rights and duties of states embracing the first five articles of the declaration of the American Institute of International Law which were incorporated in the report of Mr. Maúrtua.

Several of the delegates in the course of their remarks suggested that there appeared to be no substantial divergence of views but a difference with respect to forms of expression. The question was as to the form which would best respond to the sentiment of the Conference and the suggestion was made that the matter could be resolved by the appointment of a subcommittee which would consider the matter in all its phases and report a formula upon which all could agree.

Toward the close of the discussion, Mr. Ferrara, of Cuba, spoke with deep feeling of Cuba's history, saying that intervention in his country was a word of glory and of justice. He could not forget the past. He accepted the proposal of Mr. Maúrtua as a declaration responsive to the ideals of justice.

The appointment of a subcommittee was decided upon. Mr. Fernandes, of Brazil, the acting chairman of the committee, in announcing the appointment of the subcommittee, made a statement on behalf of his Government which concluded with these words:

The formula, suggested by the eminent reporter (Mr. Maúrtua), except for a more acceptable wording, offers a basis on which the general agreement can be obtained since that formula introduces the two inseparable features of the principle under discussion, affirming at the same time the supreme right and the supreme duty of nations. May we find, around that principle, the formula of conciliation for which all of us strive.

The following were appointed members of the subcommittee: Mr. Hughes, of the United States; Mr. Maúrtua, of Perú; Mr. Elorduy, of Mexico; Mr. Castro Beeche, of Costa Rica; Mr. Guerrero, of El Salvador; Mr. Pueyrredón, of Argentina; and Mr. Lira, of Chile.

The subcommittee held several meetings at which there was prolonged and most earnest consideration of all the questions involved, with the utmost frankness in the interchange of views. Mr. Maúrtua prepared a revised Declaration of Rights and Duties which was in substance similar to the one originally proposed, but with a different arrangement and with certain changes in language to meet the criticisms which had been expressed in the meeting of the full committee. It was found impossible, however, to reach unanimous agreement, and finally it was decided to recommend to the full committee that no further action should be taken on the subject and that its consideration should be postponed until the next conference of the American Republics. Accordingly, the following report, signed by all the members of the subcommittee (with the exception of Mr. Pueyrredón, who in the meantime had resigned from the delegation of Argentina), was presented by the subcommittee to the Committee on Public International Law on February 17:

The subcommittee appointed by the Committee on Public International Law to consider the questions presented in the report of Dr. Maúrtua, and those arising in the discussion of that report, after a long and earnest examination of these questions, with a full, candid and friendly interchange of views, finds it impossible to reach an agreement. Recognizing that in dealing with the codification of international law, the making of a declaration which is wanting in the accord which gives weight to international law would fail of its purpose, the subcommittee recommends that the subject be given further study and that its consideration be postponed until the next conference of the American Republics.

The committee unanimously adopted this report.

On the following day, February 18, at the last plenary session of the Conference, when the report of the Committee on Public International Law dealing with this subject was presented, a number of the delegates expressed their regret that the committee had found it impossible to reach an agreement. An effort was then made to interpret these expressions as an indication that an agreement was possible. Mr. Guerrero presented the following resolution:

The Sixth International Conference of American States,

Considering that at this time the firm decision of every delegation has been expressed to the effect that the principles of non-intervention and of the absolute juridical equality of states be established in a categorical manner,

RESOLVES:

That no state has the right to intervene in the internal affairs of another.

Mr. Fernandes raised a point of order, stating that the resolution reported by the Committee on Public International Law had been adopted unanimously in a spirit of harmony. He deplored the effort to reintroduce the question as the subject required further study. With this position Mr. Olaya, of Colombia, and Mr. Castro Beeche, of Costa Rica, and others agreed. There were, however, impassioned speeches in favor of Mr. Guerrero's resolution. As it seemed important that the matter should not be left without a definite presentation of the attitude and action of the American delegation and of the policies of the United States, Mr. Hughes made the following statement:

It was my privilege to serve on the subcommittee whose report the Committee on Public International Law unanimously adopted. How did it happen that that report was formulated in the manner in which it was presented to the committee? We had in the Committee on Public International Law the question of codifying the principles relating to the rights and duties of states. There was a project which was presented, and from which the resolution of the delegate of Salvador is taken, which was found in the opinion of many to be incomplete. It was but a fragmentary statement of the law. The learned reporter on that subject, Dr. Maúrtua of Perú, presented the declaration of rights and duties which had been adopted by the American Institute of International Law in 1916, an organization composed of the most distinguished jurists of all the American Republics—a declaration which had been repeatedly approved by the leading jurists of the world. A debate followed in the committee in which various views were expressed which showed the difficulty, the very great difficulty, of distinguishing between international law and political doctrine. The subject was referred to the subcommittee and there were earnest and long and candid discussions for many hours in a day and many days in a week. The suggestion that, in view of the fact that unanimity could not be obtained, the matter should not be reported for further debate which could have no effective result was not made by me. It was made by another. It was indeed made by one who had been opposing the report of Dr. Maúrtua. It was recognized that we could not agree on a statement of principles, and if we did not agree on a statement of principles, we should do nothing in furthering the cause of the codification of international law, and hence the suggestion was considered a sensible one and was adopted unanimously by the subcommittee. The subcommittee's report was presented to the full committee, and the full committee under the presidency of Dr. Guerrero unanimously adopted it.

Now, so far as I am personally concerned, I have never had a moment's desire to escape a discussion of this question. There is nothing to conceal. There are no hidden motives. There are no desires or ambitions which my country entertains which are opposed to the desires and aspirations of our sister republics. I merely recognized that this was a question which needed time and further study to resolve in principles which all could accept, and that was the view which I supposed that all my colleagues on the subcommittee, and on the full committee as well, entertained. I gladly acquiesced in their decision. Now what is the situation when we come to the actual facts of the case? There is no one here who does not have enjoyment in the free air of independence. My country was nurtured in the desire for independence. One hundred years ago we declared the policy that all the American Republics should be recognized in their independence. We have given our arms and our blood for the independence of the American Republics and are always ready to do so. We yield to none in the establishment of the ideal of sovereignty and independence for every one of the American Republics from the greatest to the smallest. And I have the right, speaking here on behalf of the delegation of the United States, to declare the policy of my country. I joined readily in the resolution of the delegation of Mexico against aggression. We want no aggression. We want no aggression against ourselves. We cherish no thought of aggression against anybody else. We desire to respect the rights of every country and to have the rights of our own country equally respected. We do not wish the territory of any American Republic. We do not wish to govern any American Republic. We do not wish to intervene in the affairs of any American Republic. We simply wish peace and order and stability and recognition of honest rights properly acquired so that this hemisphere may not only be the hemisphere of peace but the hemisphere of international justice. Much has been said of late with regard to Nicaragua. There sits the Foreign Minister of Nicaragua, a delegate of his country to this Conference. He can tell you the situation in Nicaragua and I can tell you that we desire nothing more than the independence and peace of his country and that we are there simply to aid them in obtaining free elections, in order that they may have a sovereign and independent government. I mention that merely because I speak in a spirit of entire frankness.

Now what is the real difficulty? Let us face the facts. The difficulty, if there is any, in any one of the American Republics, is not of any external aggression. It is an internal difficulty, if it exists at all. From time to time there arises a situation most deplorable and regrettable in which sovereignty is not at work, in which for a time in certain areas there is no government at all, in which for a time and within a limited sphere there is no possibility of performing the functions of sovereignty and independence. Those are the conditions that create the difficulty with which at times we find ourselves confronted. What are we to do when government breaks down and American citizens are in danger of their lives? Are we to stand by and see them killed because a government in circumstances which it cannot control and for which it may not be responsible can no longer afford reasonable protection? I am not speaking of sporadic acts of violence, or of the rising of mobs, or of those distressing incidents which may occur in any country however well administered. I am speaking of the occasions where government itself is unable to function for a time because of difficulties which confront it and which it is impossible for it to surmount.

Now it is a principle of international law that in such a case a government is fully justified in taking action—I would call it interposition of a temporary character—for the purpose of protecting the lives and property of its nationals.

I could say that that is not intervention. One can read in text books that that is not intervention. But if I should subscribe to a formula which others thought might prevent the action which a nation is entitled to take in these circumstances, there might come later the charge of bad faith because of acceptance of a formula with one interpretation in my mind while another interpretation of it is in the mind of those proposing the formula. So it was necessary to have a fair understanding. Of course the United States cannot forego its right to protect its citizens. No country should forego its right to protect its citizens. International law cannot be changed by the resolutions of this Conference. International law remains. The rights of nations remain, but nations have duties as well as rights. We all recognize that. This very formula, here proposed, is a proposal of duty on the part of a nation. But it is not the only duty. There are other obligations which courts, and tribunals declaring international law, have frequently set forth; and we cannot codify international law and ignore the duties of states, by setting up the impossible reign of self-will without any recognition upon the part of a state of its obligations to its neighbors.

When the subcommittee was appointed, Dr. Fernandes, then presiding over the full committee, suggested that in this recognition of rights and duties on a perfectly fair basis might be found the solution of our problem. It was hoped that we might be able to declare a set of principles which would clearly define our opposition to all acts of aggression, which would clearly show our desire to maintain the sovereignty and independence of states, which would establish all the rights of states that any of you could hope to see written into a code of international law, and which would at the same time recognize the obligations of states and provide a code which would represent not an isolated doctrine or a mere preachment for political purposes but the real principles of justice which we are trying to codify in this effort. It was with that purpose we worked in the subcommittee. It was not an easy task. It is not a simple task for a late afternoon at the close of the Conference. It is an easy task to indulge in the subtle simplicity of formulas that only express one tenth of the truth. We worked hard in the subcommittee and in the most friendly spirit. Let me testify to the ability of the members of this Conference to discuss these delicate questions with amity and good will. I rejoice in that. Friendship and candor can always go together. But we had to draw a code. We had to draw something which was adequate; and as I have said it was one of those who did not favor Dr. Maúrtua's recommendation taken from the declaration of the jurists, who suggested that we could not do this here. Let us study it further and let us hope that later we can attain success and unanimity.

I have made this statement merely to avoid any possible misunderstanding. I am too proud of my country to stand before you as in any way suggesting a defense of aggression or of assault upon the sovereignty or independence of any state. I stand before you to tell you that we unite with you in the aspiration for complete sovereignty and the realization of complete independence. I stand here with you ready to cooperate in every way in establishing the ideals of justice by institutions in every land which will promote fairness of dealing between man and man and nation and nation.

I cannot sacrifice the rights of my country but I will join with you in declaring the law. I will try to help you in coming to a just conclusion as to the law; but it must be the law of justice infused with the spirit which has given us from the days of Grotius this wonderful development of the law of nations, by which we find ourselves bound.

At the close of Mr. Hughes's remarks, Mr. Guerrero withdrew his motion. The report of the Committee on International Law was approved.

Project III: Status of aliens

The articles of the draft submitted to the committee reproduced in substance Project No. III of the Commission of Jurists of Rio de Janeiro, with sundry modifications.

The report proposed the omission of Article 5 of the Rio draft relating to military service of foreigners. The commission, however, preferred to retain this, and it was retained with a reservation on the part of the United States to the prohibition against military service of foreigners. In other respects, the final convention is, with changes in detail, similar to that of the Rio draft.

The revised convention was unanimously adopted in plenary session of February 18, with the reservation of the United States above specified. (Appendix 9.)

THIRD

Project IV: Treaties

After a discussion of the project, which was presented by Mr. Orestes Ferrara, of Cuba, in the course of which several amendments were suggested, the subject was referred to a subcommittee consisting of Mr. Orestes Ferrara, of Cuba; Mr. Charles E. Hughes (represented by Mr. James Brown Scott), of the United States; Mr. Jesús M. Yepes, of Colombia, and Mr. Héctor David Castro, of El Salvador.

Project No. IV of the Commission of Jurists of Rio de Janeiro was taken as the basis and its provisions modified in order to have them state more precisely and adequately the practice of nations. Two articles are new: No. 15, that upon failure to agree as to whether circumstances have changed so as to render the treaty inadequate or inapplicable, the question is to be submitted to arbitration; and No. 19, that states may adhere to treaties to which they have not been contracting parties.

There are three articles of the general convention on treaties to which reference should be made in this connection, Articles 6, 7 and 18.

The second and third paragraphs of Article 6 provide that:

In case the ratifying state makes reservations to the treaty it shall become effective when the other contracting party informed of the reservations expressly accepts them, or having failed to reject them formally, should perform actions implying its acceptance.

In international treaties celebrated between different states, a reservation made by one of them in the act of ratification affects only the application of the clause in question in the relation of the other contracting states with the state making the reservation.

This is an express acceptance of the theory and practice of the United States in the premises.

Article 7 is thus worded :

Refusal to ratify or the formulation of a reservation are acts inherent in national sovereignty and as such constitute the exercise of a right which violates no international stipulation or good form. In case of refusal it shall be communicated to the other contracting parties.

This likewise, is a formal acceptance of the theory and practice of the United States.

It therefore appears that any signatory party either to the present convention or to any other convention between American states may withhold its ratification to the treaty, or may ratify with reservations, that is to say by omission of specified articles or by interpretation of provisions of the convention; that in so doing, the signatory party exercises an act declared by the present convention to be inherent in sovereignty; and that if it should fail to ratify, or ratifies with reservations, it is not to be looked upon as acting in an unfriendly manner.

Article 18 provides that :

Two or more states may agree that their relations are to be governed by rules other than those established in general conventions celebrated by them with other states.

This precept applies not only to future treaties but also to those in effect at the time of concluding this convention.

The delegation of the United States understands that Article 18 was drafted expressly in order that the rules of this general convention cannot in any case be applied in opposition to treaties, either bilateral or multilateral, previously concluded between and among the contracting states.

The convention on treaties was adopted at the plenary session of February 18, and was signed two days later, with reservations on the part of Mexico and Bolivia. El Salvador refrained from signing. (Appendix 10.)

Project VII: Diplomatic agents

Project VIII: Consuls

The Commission of Jurists of Rio de Janeiro transmitted to the Sixth International Conference of American States two long and carefully considered projects, No. 6 on diplomatic agents and No. 7 on consuls. These were appropriately treated as two phases of a single subject, of which Mr. Castro Beeche of Costa Rica was reporter. When presented to the committee its members indulged in an exchange of views as to the general principles contained in each, especially those of diplomatic agents; and the opinion seemed to be general that they should be submitted to a subcommittee, in order to bring their articles, especially those of diplomatic agents, into closer accord with general practice.

In this subcommittee the delegation of the United States was represented by one of its members.

Many changes were proposed and accepted, so that when the revised texts were returned to the committee both were adopted without discussion, or indeed without being read article by article.

Aspirations very generally shared by the American Republics—that diplomatic agents should represent the state, not an officer of the state, and that therefore, representing the state, the time-honored distinctions of rank should be discarded, and that immunities heretofore claimed for diplomatic agents should be limited—were removed from the text and stated in a preamble, leaving their further consideration to the future.

The revised conventions on diplomatic agents and consuls were unanimously adopted in the plenary session of February 18, with but a single reservation on the part of Venezuela to the provision that, contrary to the laws of that Republic, diplomatic and consular functions might be united in one and the same person. (Appendices 11 and 12.)

Project IX: Maritime neutrality

The next project to be considered, that on Maritime Neutrality, of which Mr. Juan José Amézaga, of Uruguay, was reporter, deserves more than passing notice. In its original form it contained provisions intended to change existing practice in the interest of neutrals. As submitted to the Rio Commission some of these provisions were eliminated, whereas others were retained, such as making it the duty of neutrals to bring about the cessation of war; to meet in order to determine what combined attitude they should take; and to utilize the Pan American Union for these and other purposes. Objection was made in the general discussion to these variations from general usage. The subcommittee to which the matter was referred took into account the desires of the committee that the references to the Pan American Union should be omitted and that the projects to be reported should conform more closely to the practice of nations. The result was a modified draft, in large measure that of the thirteenth convention of the Second Hague Peace Conference of 1907, with sundry modifications and additions in order to take note of the measures which neutrals had taken to preserve their rights during the World War. As finally drafted and originally adopted, the project presupposed a war, in which the American Republics would be neutral. For this reason it was indispensable that the practice of nations should be strictly observed, as it would be undesirable on the part of the American states to attempt to change the general rights of all neutrals by a special agreement of their own. There is, however, an American Republic without access to the sea. The Bolivian delegation proposed a modification of the general rule in case of war between American Republics, to the effect that the project should contain a clause, by virtue whereof neutral states should be obliged to permit the transportation of materials of war through their territories to an American state thus shut off from the sea, provided the neutral states should not consider that their vital interests were affected. The delegation of the United States conceived this to be a just provision under the circumstances, and voted for it. It was adopted as the second paragraph of Article 22, with a reservation on the part of Chile.

The Argentine delegation proposed in committee amendments which it had suggested in the subcommittee. One of these, to the effect that armed merchantmen should be assimilated to auxiliary vessels in the service of belligerents, was carried and forms the last sentence of Article 12 of the convention. To this, the United States interposed a reservation, as did likewise Cuba and Uruguay. The convention was adopted in the plenary session of February 18, Chile and the United States expressly maintaining at the time of signing, their respective reservations. (Appendix 13.)

SIXTH

Project X: Asylum

Project XI: Obligations of states in the event of civil war

The project on "Asylum," of which Mr. González Roa, of Mexico, was reporter, was next considered—Mr. Hughes making a statement on behalf of the delegation of the United States that it would not participate in the discussion of this project, inasmuch as asylum was contrary to the practice of the United States, and, in the opinion of the Government of the United States, was not a part of general international law. His remarks were not intended to interfere with the discussion, which he hoped would end in an acceptable convention to those favoring the doctrine. Such was the result. (Appendix 14.)

Upon approval of the convention on asylum, the committee took up the question of the rights and duties of states in the event of civil war, of which Mr. González Roa was likewise reporter. He recommended "Project XI—Obligations of States in Event of Civil War," of the Commission of Jurists of Rio de Janeiro. It consisted of a single article of five numbered paragraphs. The Argentine delegation suggested that the words "civil war" should be replaced by "civil strife." This suggestion was adopted. Thereupon, paragraphs 1, 2, and 3 of the original project were accepted with slight changes. Paragraph 4, prohibiting the use of telegraphic, telephonic, or radiographic stations "for the purpose of subversive action," was omitted. Paragraph 5 was adopted, thereupon becoming paragraph 4 of the original article. The Argentine delegation proposed further additions which were accepted with slight modification, forming Articles 2 and 3 of the convention as approved by the plenary session of February 18. (Appendix 15.)

All of these conventions have an article providing that they shall not affect international obligations created by the contracting parties by virtue of international agreements. It is understood that this clause of a general nature was meant especially to refer to the obligations of some of the American Republics under the League of Nations, and to special conventions of 1923, to which the Central American Republics are parties.

SEVENTH

Project XII: Pacific settlement of international disputes

The report upon this subject, by Mr. Ricardo J. Alfaro, of Panamá, was presented on February 14, only a few days before the time fixed for the adjournment of the Conference. The report dealt with the methods which were the subject of the five parts of the project of the Commission of Jurists, to wit: Part I, Good offices and mediation; Part II, Commission of investigation; Part III, Conciliation; Part IV, Friendly composition; and Part V, Arbitration. Mr. Alfaro proposed that Parts I to IV, inclusive, of his report, should be first considered.

It should be noted that Part II of the project of the Commission of Jurists, "Commission of investigation," proposed certain amendments to the convention, called the "Gondra Convention," adopted at the Fifth International Conference of American States held at Santiago, Chile. The reporter considered these amendments and suggested others.

In relation to Part III, "Conciliation", the reporter had before him, in addition to the project of the Commission of Jurists, the proposal of Mr. Guerrero, of El Salvador (originally presented to the Committee on the Pan American Union and transferred to the Committee on Public International Law), providing as follows:

The Sixth International Conference of American States,

RESOLVES:

To create a permanent organization of the Republics of America, independent of the Governing Board of the Pan American Union, which shall constitute a Court of Conciliation and Mediation and which shall have as its principal objects the looking after the maintenance of peace and order in America, and to develop political and moral interests between the states, on a basis of cooperation, mutual respect and reciprocal assistance.

This Court shall be made up of five states members of the Pan American Union elected by the international Conferences at each of their periodical meetings.

The declarations and suggestions of this Court shall not be obligatory or final, but they shall be considered as the reflection of the conscience of America.

Its by-laws shall be prepared by the Sixth Conference at present in session in Habana.

The reporter considered this project and that of the Commission of Jurists (Part III of Project XII) as radically contradictory. He submitted the proposal of Mr. Guerrero, without extended comment, for the consideration of the committee.

There was a brief discussion of the portion of Mr. Alfaro's report thus submitted and it was agreed that the subject should be referred to a subcommittee.

At the next meeting of the committee, on February 16, while the subject of "Treaties" was under discussion, Mr. González Roa, of Mexico, presented a proposal relating to the outlawry of war. It was agreed that this proposal should be referred to the subcommittee dealing with Mr. Alfaro's report.

Mr. Alfaro presented the remaining portion (Part V) of his report on the subject of "Arbitration." This subject had been considered in the project of the Commission of Jurists in the most general terms. Mr. Alfaro reviewed the history of arbitration and strongly emphasized the necessity of providing a concrete plan for obligatory arbitration. He concluded by presenting a definite project containing the following provisions:

ARTICLE 19. Questions of whatever nature which may arise between two or more states which have not been settled through diplomatic channels shall be submitted to arbitration.

ARTICLE 20. Arbitration shall be obligatory in all classes of controversies except:

1. Those which involve constitutional provisions in force in one or the other state party to the controversy.

2. Those which may place in jeopardy the independence of a state. In such case, and for such state, arbitration shall be voluntary; but it shall be obligatory for the other state, party to the controversy.

ARTICLE 21. The following questions shall, in all circumstances, be submitted to arbitration:

1. Differences relating to the interpretation or application of public treaties.

2. Differences which relate to the interpretation or application of a principle of international law.

It is furthermore understood that the question as to whether a controversy is included in the exceptions mentioned in the preceding article, shall be submitted to arbitration.

Mr. Alfaro proposed in Article 22 six sorts of tribunals, to wit:

- (a) A tribunal with a single judge or arbitrator selected by mutual consent by the states parties to the controversy;
- (b) A tribunal composed of three judges, each state party to the controversy selecting one judge, the third to be selected by common agreement;
- (c) A tribunal constituted or organized in whatever form that may be agreed upon by the states parties to the controversy;
- (d) The Pan American Court of International Justice, provided such court be established;
- (e) The Permanent Court of International Justice established at The Hague; and
- (f) The Permanent Court of Arbitration organized in accordance with the Hague conventions of 1899 and 1907.

Additional articles were proposed providing for the manner in which the tribunal should be selected and for its procedure.

With respect to a Pan American Court of International Justice, Mr. Alfaro adverted to the fact that the delegation of Costa Rica had submitted to the Fifth International Conference of American States a project for the establishment of such a tribunal; that the American Institute of International Law had formulated another project for a judicial organ called "International Pan American Court of Justice"; and that the Commission of Jurists had not submitted to the Conference any conclusion with respect to these projects. In addition, there was the project submitted to the present Conference by the delegation of Colombia for the organization of a Pan American Court of International Justice. Mr. Alfaro considered that the first question for the committee to decide was whether or not a tribunal of this sort should be established and it could then consider the nature of the project which it should adopt as a basis of discussion. He laid before the committee as a part of his report the three proposals which have been mentioned.

An interesting discussion followed in which Mr. Lira, of Chile; Mr. Maúrtua, of Perú; Mr. Castro Beeche, of Costa Rica, and Mr. Amézaga, of Uruguay, took an important part. Mr. Castro Beeche emphasized the importance of making an exception, from the requirement of obligatory arbitration, of matters which had already been adjudicated by an arbitral tribunal. In the course of the discussion Mr. Hughes endorsed the proposal of Mr. González Roa as to the outlawry of war, and, with respect to the particular proposals of Mr. Alfaro and the general question of arbitration, made the following observations:

Article 19 of the project (Mr. Alfaro's) provides that questions of whatever nature which may arise between two or more states which have not been settled through diplomatic channels, shall be submitted to arbitration. But it is at once recognized in the following article, Article 20, that this generality must have some limitation. While it is true that under Article 21 it is provided that the question whether a controversy is included in the exceptions shall be submitted to arbitration, nevertheless that is not intended to destroy the exceptions. The provision may be open to the criticism which Dr. Lira has stated, but it must be supposed that, from the standpoint of the reporter, it was intended that the exceptions should be effective. When the exception is set forth in Article 20, the first exception, it is found that it eliminates controversies which involve constitutional provisions. I agree with Dr. Lira that this is extremely broad and vague. From the standpoint of the United States there are few questions that could not be claimed to involve constitutional provisions, if you say that all the powers and functions for which the constitution provides are the subject of exception.

Then in the second provision of Article 20 reference is made to controversies which may place in jeopardy the independence of a state. I do not object to that, although I agree that it is very vague. I think, if I understood Dr. Maúrtua aright, he thought "sovereignty and independence" would be a better expression. I agree to that. The point I desire to make, however, is that these two classes of exceptions in Article 20 reveal the consciousness of the necessity of some limitation. The question then is a practical one which it is necessary for us to decide in approaching a convention: What will give appropriate expression to the limitations that are deemed to be essential?

Now we have certain categories of controversies. We have controversies to which principles of law and equity are applicable. We call those justiciable questions. We could probably find a basis for agreement with regard to questions of that class. I quite understand that questions of that class might sometimes involve sovereignty and independence. We cannot make progress by putting our heads in the sand. No nation will knowingly submit to arbitration its sovereignty, in a matter of first importance, whether it is called a justiciable question or has some other legal nomenclature to describe it. But we do have certain classes of cases which we call justiciable, which with limited exceptions we can agree upon. Then there are controversies which relate solely to political expediency, and to which no principles of law or of equity apply. Those give us the greatest difficulty. It is not that we object, or any of us here would object, to the impartial decision of the most enlightened mind representing the justice of the Deity even in such questions. But we fail to find an assurance of that orderly and wise disposition in ordinary arbitral decisions. It is not the lack of a desire to have a pacific settlement, but the difficulty is in the nature of the question, because you submit to the arbitrator something as to the decision of which he has no principle to guide him.

Then there is a third class of cases of controversies which should not be strictly regarded as international controversies at all. One state objects to the internal legislation of another state in a matter entirely within the province of that state. The objecting state should recognize that that is a matter of internal government. But internal government projects in these days of intimate relations, in the actual force of its decisions, into areas where other governments seek to find a freer play. So, about internal questions, some controversies may arise. We all have questions in each of our countries which we think are within our competency, because they relate to internal administration. I could name some and I could go around this room and enumerate questions of that sort which I am sure many of you would never submit to arbitration.

Now we must face the facts in this matter fairly. My conception of amity among the nations is a sort of friendship which will enable us to deal with these difficult questions in our negotiations with each other without the effort to compel nations to relinquish rights or to change their internal organization, or to submit to the decrees of others in matters which affect internal regulations according to their conceptions of their interests. So our problem is, What progress can we make?

There is one class of controversies about which we can make a convention without great difficulty. Those are controversies relating to questions involving the interpretation of treaties or the principles of international law, where the claims are for loss of life or personal injuries, or injuries to property, and where the reparation sought is entirely pecuniary. We could have a claims convention without going into some of the difficulties which would arise in dealing with a broader convention. I do not mean to exclude the broader convention. I am simply thinking of making practical progress by having something on which we can start with a maximum of agreement. We can have two classes of conventions, a convention relating to pecuniary claims, and another convention relating to broader matters.

When we come to the broader convention, we would then consider the various categories of the controversies to which I have referred and endeavor to see how closely we can come to an agreement in sympathy with the principle Dr. Maúrtua has proposed, of making all the progress possible.

I do not wish to detain the committee with a long statement but I cannot forbear to say that I think that the project presented fails to exhaust the possibilities. While states might not be willing to submit to arbitration various delicate questions which they thought impinged upon the free exercise of their internal authority, still it might be possible to have joint commissions whose reports advising the different governments and legislatures would be of great value. In 1909 the United States made its treaty with Great Britain with respect to Canada, establishing a joint commission in which each Government has an equal number of members, and to which all sorts of questions arising on our boundary can be referred for examination, the taking of testimony, and report to the respective Governments. A nation may be willing, entirely willing, to have a permanent joint commission with its neighbor or neighbors, so that in any question that arises there may be an explication of the questions, not for the purpose of decision, but so that each Government may be advised of the views and findings of a commission on which they have an equal representation, and then its legislature, supreme in its sphere, can act with that knowledge. This plan has worked very well, and questions which might not perhaps have been submitted to arbitration—some of difficulty, some of delicacy—have been considered by the permanent joint commission and reports have been made which have led to satisfactory adjustments.

Let us be astute to find means suited to the different exigencies which we cannot escape.

A final word: The test of arbitration, and the weakness of plans for arbitration lie in the selection of the third arbitrator, or fifth arbitrator, as the case may be, who actually decides the controversy. Arbitrators are selected for the respective nations, and in some historic cases, the arbitrator selected by one power has not supported that power, but those cases are extremely rare. We know in advance the pivotal man, the third man, is the man who will decide. I have been in negotiations for arbitration where the names of the most distinguished jurists in the world have been submitted and eliminated. No agreement could be had. The test of the arbitration agreement is in your plan for the selection of the third arbitrator. Reference was made to the apprehension of states in regard to arbitration. They center about this selection. Now this project, when it comes to the final test where the parties do not agree, leaves the selection to chance. That is to say, if there is no agreement, two chiefs of state are to be designated, one by each party, who maintain friendly relations with both parties; but, in the language of treaties and diplomacy, friendship is not the same as it is in the language of social intercourse. There are chiefs of state at times whom we would not desire to select, although we would be far from suggesting that our relations in a diplomatic sense were not entirely friendly. These two chiefs of state, one selected by each party, are designated, and one of these is to be selected by lot, for example, the flip of a coin.

There are two objections: The first is that it is by chance, and the whole arbitration rests upon that. The broader you make the arbitration the more important is this point. The second objection to such a method of choice is that it is essentially political. I think we should endeavor to get away from a final selection, in case we could not agree upon a third arbitrator, which would be in any manner influenced by political considerations. It might be impossible entirely to eliminate that feature, but we should strive in that direction in order to have an impartial, juridical settlement. My suggestion would be that instead of providing for two chiefs of state, one to be selected by lot, we should select three outstanding non-American jurists, who should select, with a sense of responsibility of their reputation and juridical standing, the third arbitrator, who in that case might more closely approach to our ideal of an impartial judge. Such jurists would be more likely to give us the selection of some one on whom we could rely as not being influenced by political considerations.

We often in our experience have had important interests come to us and say: "We should like to arbitrate our controversy. Can you suggest someone as an arbitrator?" And when that is stated to a judge, to a lawyer of eminence, to a man who has a reputation to sustain as an exponent of law and justice, he feels the greatest obligation to assist the parties to obtain an absolute impartial and just determination of their controversy.

Now it is very late in our Conference. We have been unable to reach this matter before. I do not wish to detain you with observations. I wish to join with you in this effort to the full extent of my ability. If we cannot complete it now, let us prepare for a future day when we can accomplish our purpose with full consideration of all the questions which necessarily arise. I desire to show to you the sincere cooperation of the United States, which is opposed to any act of aggression; which desires to see force eliminated from this hemisphere; which is seeking nothing but the good order, the independence and the prosperity of all the American states.

At the close of the discussion, it was decided that the subject should be referred to a subcommittee, and later it was agreed that with this subcommittee there should be combined the subcommittee appointed to deal with the other portions of Mr. Alfaro's report. Accordingly, the following subcommittee was constituted to consider the whole subject of pacific settlement, with the following members: Chairman, Mr. Fernandes, of Brazil; Mr. Hughes, of the United States of America; Mr. Lira, of Chile; Mr. Maúrtua, of Perú; Mr. Alfaro, of Panamá; Mr. Podestá Costa, of Argentina; Mr. Yepes, of Colombia; and Mr. Gustavo Gutiérrez, of Cuba.

As the Conference was on the eve of adjournment, the subcommittee went immediately to work with the result that they recommended to the committee the adoption of the following resolution:

The Sixth International Conference of American States,

RESOLVES:

Whereas the American Republics desire to express that they condemn war as an instrument of national policy in their mutual relations; and

Whereas the American Republics have the most fervent desire to contribute in every possible manner to the development of international means for the pacific settlement of conflicts between states:

1. That the American Republics adopt obligatory arbitration as the means which they will employ for the pacific solution of their international differences of a juridical character.

2. That the American Republics will meet in Washington within the period of one year in a conference of conciliation and arbitration to give conventional form to the realization of this principle, with the minimum exceptions which they may consider indispensable to safeguard the independence and sovereignty of the states, as well as matters of a domestic concern, and to the exclusion also of matters involving the interest or referring to the action of a state not a party to the convention.

3. That the Governments of the American Republics will send for this end plenipotentiary juriconsults with instructions regarding the maximum and the minimum which they would accept in the extension of obligatory arbitral jurisdiction.

4. That the convention or conventions of conciliation and arbitration which may be concluded should leave open a protocol for progressive arbitration which would permit the development of this beneficent institution up to its maximum.

5. That the convention or conventions which may be agreed upon, after signature, should be submitted immediately to the respective Governments for their ratification in the shortest possible time.

At the last meeting of the committee, on February 17, this resolution was unanimously adopted.

Mr. González Roa, of Mexico, expressed his approval of the resolution and, in the light of its preamble, withdrew his separate proposal in respect to the outlawry of war. At the last plenary session of the Conference, on February 18, however, Mr. González Roa renewed his proposal in a somewhat different form and it was unanimously adopted as follows:

The Sixth International Conference of American States,
Considering:

That the American nations should always be inspired in solid cooperation for justice and the general good;

That nothing is so opposed to this cooperation as the use of violence;

That there is no international controversy, however serious it may be, which can not be peacefully arranged if the parties desire in reality to arrive at a pacific settlement;

That war of aggression constitutes an international crime against the human species;

RESOLVES :

1. All aggression is considered illicit and as such is declared prohibited.
2. The American states will employ all pacific means to settle conflicts which may arise between them.

The subcommittee was of the view, and the full committee decided, that there should be no recommendation for a change in the Gondra Convention which still awaits ratification on the part of a number of the signatory states.

EIGHTH

Frontier police

The reporter, Mr. Pueyrredón, of Argentina, presented a project for a convention containing provisions for cooperation between frontier police authorities and authorizing pursuit and capture of criminals by the authorities of one country in the adjoining territory of another under specified conditions.

In view of the diversity of conditions on different frontiers, and the sensitiveness of communities in relation to the admission of foreign officials, this proposal did not meet with the approval of the committee, which recommended that the states, respectively, should consider the subject to the end that they might arrive at agreements suited to the exigencies on particular frontiers.

Economic use of international rivers

The subject of the economic use of international rivers was considered by the Committee on Public International Law and Frontier Police. Mr. Pueyrredón accepted the designation as reporter on this subject. The report advocated the right of a state to appropriate the waters of rivers flowing within its territory, upon compensation to be made to the other country or countries for losses which might be incurred by the diversion of the waters, by the diverting state. There was opposition to this report. Mr. Fernandes, of the delegation of Brazil, objected to the consideration of the report on the ground that it properly belonged to the economic section, and that, in any event, it was a new question and should not be discussed without the consent of two thirds of the countries represented in the Conference. The question was referred to the Committee on Initiatives, composed of the presidents of the delegations attending the Conference. This body decided against the consideration of the topic at the present time, referring it to the next International Conference of American States.

Conclusion

It would seem, therefore, that the labors of the Committee on Public International Law and Frontier Police were of lasting importance, for if an agreement was not reached upon the projects contained in Mr. Maúrtua's report, nevertheless seven subjects—some of very great importance—were codified, thus furnishing the first example of the conscious codification of international law in an international conference composed of plenipotentiaries; the acceptance of resolutions expressing condemnation of war as an instrument of national policy, and in favor of the employment of all pacific means to settle conflicts which may arise between the American Republics; and the adoption of obligatory arbitration of disputes of a legal nature, for the first time in an international gathering, without the reservations which have hitherto been customary. It is not too much to say that through the acceptance in plenary session of these various projects of the committee by the Sixth International Conference of American States, the American Continent has been dedicated to peace based upon justice, independence, and the equality of its members.

COMMITTEE ON PRIVATE INTERNATIONAL LAW AND UNIFORM LEGISLATION

(No. 3)

Topic 3 of Article II of the program, comprising the following items, was assigned to this committee:

3. The Commission of Jurists which assembled at Rio de Janeiro was entrusted, by resolution of the Fifth International Conference of American States, with making comparative studies tending toward uniformity in civil law, commercial law, procedure law, and other branches of private law; and the Governing Board has recommended that they give preferential attention to the preparation of projects of uniform legislation on:

- (a) Commercial law and other branches of legislation in which uniformity is possible and desirable;
- (b) Maritime law, for the preservation of life and property on board ship;
- (c) Principles to which the juridical status of companies organized in a foreign state should be adjusted with a view to securing uniform standards;
- (d) Legislative measures for extending to women the same civil rights as those enjoyed by adult males;
- (e) Bases for determining the nationality of individuals with a view to eliminating the conflict of laws on nationality;
- (f) Legislation designed to prevent the loss of nationality by a woman because of marriage;
- (g) Recognition of the validity, by the authorities of the states represented at the Conference or which adhere to its conventions, of the acts and documents relating to the civil status of persons, estates, and contracts made by foreigners before the respective diplomatic and consular agents, and the preparation of a standard form for each of the aforesaid instruments;
- (h) Commercial arbitration;
- (i) Elimination of the differences in the juridical system relative to bills of exchange and checks, by means of an international agreement or uniform legislation;
- (j) Organization and regulations of the international service of checks and postal money orders; and
- (k) Regulation of the use of water power and other uses or applications of the waters of international rivers for industrial and agricultural purposes.

The United States was represented on Committee No. 3 by Mr. O'Brien and Mr. Scott. The chairman was Mr. Víctor Maúrtua, of Perú; Mr. Scott was vice chairman; and the reporters and the subjects assigned to them were the following:

- (1) Eduardo Espínola, of Brazil: Private international law.
- (2) Julio García, of Mexico: Bills of exchange and other credit instruments.
- (3) Leonel Aguirre, of Uruguay: Rights of women—Loss of nationality by marriage.
- (4) Morgan J. O'Brien, of the United States of America: Commercial law and commercial arbitration.
- (5) Luis Denegri, of Perú: Maritime commercial law, and regulation of the use of water power.
- (6) Francisco G. Yanes, of Venezuela: Nationality.

One of the most important matters dealt with by Committee No. 3 was the Bustamante Code of private international law prepared by Mr. Antonio Sánchez de Bustamante, as approved by the Commission of Jurists of Rio de Janeiro and transmitted to the Sixth International Conference of American States. The principal activities of the committee were related to it. The report on the code prepared by Mr. Eduardo Espínola (Brazil), which was read to the committee at its third session, presented a form of convention whereunder the contracting parties accept and agree to enforce the code of private international law annexed thereto. This report was approved by the committee, with several slight changes, and subsequently adopted by the Conference in the plenary session of February 13. The attitude of the Government of the United States toward the code of private international law was made a matter of record in the committee, and the United States delegation abstained from voting on it. While the code was accepted by eighteen affirmative votes, the delegations from several countries, including Mexico, Argentina, Uruguay, Brazil, and Chile, accompanied their votes with reservations. (Appendix 6.)

The Mexican reporter, Mr. Julio García, submitted an extensive report on "Bills of exchange and other instruments of credit," wherein it is recommended that the American states adopt a uniform law on bills of exchange and other instruments of credit based on the Hague rules of 1912. The report was accompanied by a draft form of the proposed uniform law, and suggested that the project for the uniform law referred to should be prepared by a commission of jurists appointed for the purpose or by the Inter American High Commission. This recommendation was accepted by the committee without discussion and was approved in plenary session on February 18. (Appendix 58.)

The Uruguayan reporter, Mr. Aguirre, presented to the committee a report on the "Rights of women—loss of nationality by marriage" in which it was recommended that an inter-American Commission of Women be formed charged with the task of preparing studies on the subject of the civil and political equality of women to be presented to the Seventh International Conference of American States. The report likewise recommended that the Governments of the American states study and adopt legal measures which will tend to concede to women certain rights which they do not at present enjoy in some states. The resolution as accepted by the committee and approved in plenary session on February 18 appears in Appendix 61.

The report on "Commercial arbitration" presented by the American delegate, Mr. Morgan J. O'Brien, was accepted by the committee without discussion, and was approved in plenary session on February 18. The report recommended that the Sixth Conference limit itself to the readoption of the resolutions of the Fifth Conference respecting the extra-judicial arbitration of commercial controversies. The resolution adopted by the Conference appears in Appendix 60.

The presentation to the committee of reports on items 5 and 6 of its program ("Maritime commercial law," and "Nationality") was dispensed with, and the reports described above consequently comprise the full program of this committee. In addition, however, the following action was taken by the committee:

(1) A resolution by the Nicaraguan delegation recommending to the American states whose laws may contain other principles that their laws be revised so as to permit the organization of stock companies without specifying the amount of their capital or of their stock and otherwise to facilitate the establishment of stock companies. This resolution, which was approved in plenary session on February 18, appears in Appendix 59.

(2) A proposal presented by Mr. Antonio Sánchez de Bustamante, of Cuba, and approved by the Conference in plenary session on February 18, recommends that the American states adhere to the Brussels conventions of September 23, 1910, relative to assistance and salvage, to the convention of April 10, 1926, relative to naval privilege and mortgage, and to the convention of November 1922 relative to the limitation of responsibility of shipowners. (Appendix 72.)

(3) A proposal was approved by this committee, upon presentation by the Salvadoran delegation, in which it is recommended that the Technical Committees dealing with private international law study the organization of the judiciary in each country to the end that the decisions of the Conference may be carried out. (Appendix 74.)

(4) An agreement by the committee to the effect that a resolution should be approved in the sense that the Sixth Conference concurs that the technical committees shall devote themselves to preparatory work on private international law, bearing in mind the desirability of having each of the Republics adopt the necessary measures for the success and application of the principles agreed upon.

The final action taken by this committee consisted in the presentation before the plenary session held on February 18, of a general report on "The permanency of the International Commission of Jurists of Rio de Janeiro and development of preparatory work for the unification of legislation and of the codification of international law through permanent technical organizations." The text of this resolution, as approved by the Conference, appears in Appendix 73.

(5) Mr. O'Brien presented a second resolution, which likewise was accepted by the committee, and approved in plenary session on February 13. which recommends that the attention of the Governments of the American states be directed to the economic waste and loss occasioned by the theft and pilferage of cargo and that they enact such laws as may be required in order to punish severely the crime of broaching and pilfering cargo. This resolution appears in Appendix 78.

COMMITTEE ON COMMUNICATIONS

(No. 4)

This committee, on which the United States was represented by Mr. Underwood and Mr. Fletcher, considered Article III of the program of the Conference: "Problems of communications." The first session was held on the afternoon of January 19, 1928, at which time Mr. Sampaio Correa of Brazil was elected chairman; Mr. Tulio M. Cestero of the Dominican Republic, vice chairman; and Mr. Fletcher was designated general reporter.

The topics referred to this committee were as follows:

- (1) Consideration of the results of the work of the Inter-American Commission on Commercial Aviation, provided for by resolution of the Fifth International Conference of American States.
- (2) Regulation of international automotive traffic.
- (3) Means for facilitating the development of fluvial intercommunication between the nations of America.
- (4) (a) International regulation of railway traffic.
(b) Consideration of the report of the Pan American Railway Committee.
- (5) Organization of a technical commission to study and recommend the most effective means for the establishment of steamship lines to connect the countries of America and to recommend measures for the elimination of all unnecessary port formalities.
- (6) Consideration of the results of the Pan American Highway Conference, which met at Buenos Aires in October 1925, in compliance with a resolution of the Fifth International Conference of American States.

- (7) Consideration of the results of the Inter-American Electrical Communications Conference, which met at Mexico City in compliance with a resolution of the Fifth International Conference of American States.

These topics were, at the suggestion of the reporter, divided into seven sections and a special ponente or reporter appointed for each subdivision as follows:

- (1) Commercial aviation: Mr. Fletcher, reporter.
- (2) Regulation of international automotive traffic and results of Pan American Highway Conference: Mr. Espil, of Argentina, reporter.
- (3) Means for facilitating the development of fluvial intercommunication: Mr. Callorda, of Uruguay, reporter.
- (4) International regulation of railway traffic: Mr. Tinoco, of Costa Rica, reporter.
- (5) Consideration of the report of the Pan American Railway Committee: Mr. Denegri, of Perú, reporter.
- (6) Establishment of steamship lines and elimination of unnecessary port formalities: Mr. Morales, of Cuba, reporter.
- (7) Results of Electrical Communications Conference: Mr. Ramírez, of Paraguay, reporter.

(1) COMMERCIAL AVIATION

As reporter on commercial aviation, Mr. Fletcher submitted the project of convention on commercial aviation formulated by the Pan American Union, with certain amendments suggested in the Department's instructions. The most important amendment presented by Mr. Fletcher had relation to Article 31 of the project, which read:

The right of any of the contracting states to enter into any convention or special agreement with any other state or states concerning international aerial navigation is recognized, so long as such convention or special agreement shall not impair the rights or obligations of any of the states parties to this convention, acquired or imposed herein.

The United States delegation suggested the addition of the following proviso:

Provided, however, that prohibited areas within their respective territories, and regulations pertaining thereto, may be agreed upon by two or more states for military reasons or in the interest of public safety. Such agreements, and all regulations pursuant thereto, shall be subject to the same conditions as those set forth in Article 5 of this convention with respect to prohibited areas within the territory of a particular state.

In the discussion it appeared that most of the amendments suggested by the reporter were acceptable to the committee, but Mr. Espil, of the Argentine delegation, suggested that this committee adopt the definition of private aircraft contained in the international convention relating to regulation of aerial navigation signed at Paris on October 13, 1919. Mr. Olaya Herrera, of Colombia, also desired that aircraft under contract by a state or subsidized thereby, carrying both mail and passengers, should be considered private aircraft; but his principal preoccupation was with respect to the proviso proposed by the United States delegation to Article 31 and expressed the fear that the proviso as drawn might make it possible to extend the prohibited zone referred to therein to include the territory of an entire state. The Mexican delegation indicated its desire also to propose certain amendments to be made to the project of convention. A subcommittee was therefore appointed composed of the chairman of the committee, Mr. Sampaio Correa, and Mr. Fletcher; Mr. Olaya (Colombia); Mr. Espil (Argentina); and Mr. Elorduy (Mexico), to consider the amendments which had been or might be proposed to the convention. Amendments to the convention proposed by the delegations of Brazil, Colombia, Mexico, and Salvador were considered by the subcommittee.

The subcommittee held a number of meetings and decided amongst other things to adopt the definition of private aircraft contained in Article 30 of the Paris convention with the addition of the words "and naval" so that military aircraft will include both military and naval planes; to delete Article 28 of the project relating to torts or crimes, etc., committed on aircraft in flight and refer this general subject to the Committee on Private International Law; to refer to the Committee on Public International Law the amendment proposed by the delegation of Mexico to Article 30 relating to the prohibition of embargo in times of peace upon airplane parts, etc.; to adopt the following proviso to be added to Article 31 of the original project:

Provided, however, that two or more states, for reasons of reciprocal convenience and interest may agree upon appropriate regulations pertaining to the operation of aircraft and the fixing of specified routes. These regulations shall guarantee equality of treatment of the aircraft of each and every one of the contracting states and shall be subject to the same conditions as are set forth in Article 5 of the convention with respect to prohibited areas within the territory of a particular state.

Nothing contained in this convention shall affect the rights and obligations established by existing treaties.

It was furthermore agreed to entrust the Cuban Government instead of the Pan American Union with all duties in connection with the ratification of the convention; to open adherence to the convention to all the states instead of limiting it to members of the Pan American Union; to adopt the arbitration procedure provided for in Article 18 of the international radiotelegraphic convention signed at Washington, November 25, 1927, for the arbitration of disagreements arising in connection with the execution and interpretation of the convention; and to adopt other amendments and additions proposed by the various delegations with the view to securing equality of treatment of aircraft engaged in international commerce in the contracting states.

The report of the subcommittee was presented on February 7, and unanimously adopted by the committee.

In the general discussion of the proposed treaty, Mr. Olaya Herrera, of Colombia, who had throughout the discussions in the committee and subcommittee evinced the greatest interest in the amendment proposed by the United States to Article 31 of the original project, stated that he desired to ask the delegate of the United States (Mr. Fletcher) for some explanation of the reasons and motives underlying the amendment proposed by the United States delegation and referred to the deep interest which Colombia had in the fullest possible development of inter-American commercial aviation. To this Mr. Fletcher replied that he felt it was not necessary, before such a distinguished gathering of the representatives of America, to stress the vital importance which the Panamá Canal has, not only to the United States but to all the nations of this hemisphere and to the maritime commerce of the world. He said that he had no hesitation in saying that the desire of the United States to safeguard the Panamá Canal prompted our suggestion of this amendment which, it will be noted, is optional. It paves the way to an agreement between the United States and the Republic of Panamá for the establishment and operation of practicable inter-American air lines, the operation of which should not jeopardize the safety, protection, and uninterrupted operation of the Panamá Canal. Mr. Fletcher stated that this article does not bind the Republic of Panamá to make such agreement, but as stated by him previously, contemplates the possibility of such an arrangement. He further added that in his opinion there was no inherent antagonism between the practicable operation of commercial air lines and the operation of the Canal; they should be complementary, one of the other. Mr. Fletcher stated that we have opened this treaty for the adherence of all nations of the world, and this fact, it seemed to him, sufficiently explains our interest in seeing that the establishment and development of commercial aviation should in no wise jeopardize the existence of the Canal.

Mr. Fletcher stated that at the same time the United States had no desire unnecessarily to make the Panamá Canal an obstacle to the growth and development of this new means of inter-American communication. He added that as he had said, the United States felt that it would be entirely possible, in agreement with our friends of the Republic of Panamá, to make such arrangements as would, while safeguarding the Canal, facilitate the operation and development of inter-American air lines.

The delegate of Perú (Mr. Denegri) and the delegate of Chile (Mr. Silva) called attention to the great interest which their respective countries had in the protection and uninterrupted operation of the Panamá Canal and their approval of and satisfaction with the statements made by the United States delegate. Mr. Olaya also expressed his satisfaction and agreement.

Mr. Alfaro, of Panamá, raised the question as to the import of the sentence reading "Nothing contained in this convention shall affect the rights and obligations established by existing treaties." In the discussion which followed it was made clear that this referred to treaties of a general character actually in force but did not embrace those not yet ratified.

At the suggestion of Mr. Olaya (Colombia) it was decided that a transcript of the minutes of this meeting of the Committee on Communications should be sent to each of the governments participating in this Conference. After the report of the subcommittee was approved the committee adopted a resolution proposed by Mr. Fletcher reading as follows:

The Sixth International Conference of American States resolves to approve the convention on commercial aviation proposed by the Committee on Communications of this Conference and to recommend the signature thereof by the plenipotentiaries of the American states here represented.

The text of the convention appears in Appendix 7.

At this meeting of the committee Mr. Espil (Argentina) proposed the following resolution which was unanimously adopted.

To declare that it regards with warmest sympathy the idea of the Honorable President of the United States, Mr. Calvin Coolidge, of convening, in the coming month of December, an International Conference on Civil Aviation to be held at Washington, and earnestly wishes, in the interest of international harmony and, especially, of the progress of international and inter-American commercial aviation, that this initiative may be promptly and successfully carried out.

(2) REGULATION OF INTERNATIONAL AUTOMOTIVE TRAFFIC AND RESULTS OF PAN AMERICAN HIGHWAY CONFERENCE

The reporter, Mr. Espil (Argentina), proposed to the committee on January 24 a resolution, which was adopted without debate, recommending that the Second Pan American Congress of Highways formulate the bases of a convention for the international regulation of automotive traffic, and a project for a uniform law of traffic regulation. (Appendix 40.)

On January 30, on the proposal of Mr. Alvarez (Salvador), the committee also adopted without debate a resolution that the recommendation of the First Pan American Congress of Highways to the effect that steamers touch at certain maritime ports of the West Indies be enlarged to include Central America. (Appendix 46.)

On February 7 the committee approved a resolution proposed by Mr. Ramírez (Paraguay) approving the construction of the Pan American highway. The text of this resolution appears in Appendix 47.

In this connection it may be noted that Mr. Salazar (Perú) presented to the Committee on Initiatives a resolution, seconded by Mr. Fletcher, and afterwards approved in plenary session by the Conference, relative to the construction of a longitudinal communication highway. (Appendix 34.)

(3) MEANS FOR FACILITATING THE DEVELOPMENT OF FLUVIAL INTER-COMMUNICATION

The reporter, Mr. Callorda (Uruguay), reported a resolution on the above subject, which was adopted on January 30 without debate, recommending that the respective countries undertake the study of the navigability of rivers within their territory. (Appendix 43.)

(4) INTERNATIONAL REGULATION OF RAILWAY TRAFFIC

The reporter, Mr. Arturo Tinoco (Costa Rica), presented a resolution which after discussion and amendment was adopted in the form appearing in Appendix 45. This resolution recommended that a subcommittee of the Pan American Railway Committee be organized to study the convention governing international railways.

(5) CONSIDERATION OF THE REPORT OF THE PAN AMERICAN RAILWAY COMMITTEE

The reporter, Mr. Denegri (Perú), on February 4 read a long report in which he explained the difficulties in the way of the change of route of the Pan American Railway proposed by the Pan American Railway Committee in its resolution of April 28, 1927, and in which he recommended that the original Andean route be retained. The resolution proposed by Mr. Denegri was adopted by the committee, the Argentine delegate abstaining, and appears in Appendix 44.

(6) ESTABLISHMENT OF STEAMSHIP LINES AND ELIMINATION OF UNNECESSARY PORT FORMALITIES

The reporter, Mr. Morales Coello (Cuba), reported to the committee on January 26 a resolution on the subject of steamship lines and elimination of port formalities, recommending that the Governing Board of the Pan American Union convene a technical conference to study these subjects. This resolution was approved by the committee and subsequently by the Conference. (Appendix 42.)

(7) RESULTS OF ELECTRICAL COMMUNICATIONS CONFERENCES

The reporter, Mr. Ramírez (Paraguay), proposed to the committee a resolution, which was adopted by the committee without debate on January 26 recommending that the states signatories to the electrical communications convention of 1924 and the radiotelegraphic convention of Washington of 1927 ratify these conventions as soon as possible. (Appendix 41.)

Mr. Fletcher called attention to the fact that the United States was not a party to the convention signed in the city of Mexico in 1924 and that he understood that the United States was not to be considered as joining in any recommendation in regard to that convention.

All of the resolutions referred to above, adopted by the Committee on Problems of Communications, were adopted by the Conference in plenary session on February 15, 1928.

COMMITTEE ON INTELLECTUAL COOPERATION

(No. 5)

The Committee on Intellectual Cooperation, on which the United States was represented by Mr. Wilbur and Mr. Rowe, considered the topics contained in Article IV of the agenda of the Conference.

At the first meeting of the committee Mr. Gonzalo Zaldumbide (Ecuador) was elected chairman and Mr. Ricardo J. Alfaro (Panamá) vice chairman. Mr. Rafael Oreamuno (Costa Rica) was chosen as general reporter.

The nine topics falling under the head of intellectual cooperation were divided into groups or ponencias as follows:

A. Reporter: Mr. Julio García (Mexico)

Topic 1. Establishment of a Pan American Geographical Institute which shall serve as a center of coordination, distribution, and dissemination of geographical studies in the American states and as an organ of cooperation between the geographical institutes of America for facilitating the study of boundary questions between the American nations.

Topic 3. Recommendation to the countries, members of the Union, that have not yet done so, to publish geodetic, geological, agricultural maps, etc., which will give an idea of their natural resources, possibilities of development, and also of their means of communication.

B. Reporter: Mr. Adolfo Costa du Rels (Bolivia)

Topic 2. Recommendation to the countries of America that in their legislation they levy a minimum duty on the importation of books and minimum postal rates on books and periodicals.

Topic 4. Revision of the convention on intellectual property signed at Buenos Aires (1910).

C. Reporter: Mr. Rodolfo García Arias (Argentina)

Topic 5. Establishment of scholarships and fellowships.

Topic 6. Exchange of professors and students.

- Topic 7. To recommend the establishment of special chairs, supported or subsidized by the government, for the study of the Spanish, English, and Portuguese languages and of their respective literatures.
- Topic 8. To recommend the establishment in the universities of the countries, members of the Pan American Union, of special chairs for the study of the commercial legislation of the American Republics.

D. Reporter: Mr. Juan Vicente Ramírez (Paraguay)

- Topic 9. Consideration of the results of the Pan American Congress of Journalists, which met at Washington in compliance with a resolution of the Fifth International Conference of American States.

At the first meeting it was decided that reports after being read should be published before discussion and vote.

At the fourth meeting the delegate of Brazil, Mr. Lindolfo Collor, paid tribute to Andrew Carnegie and Peter Goldsmith for their devotion to closer intellectual cooperation between the American nations. Mr. Wilbur, on behalf of the delegation of the United States, replied in fitting manner.

The report concerning Topic 2 was then put to discussion. The Mexican delegation made certain suggestions with relation to the freer interchange of books and periodicals and the delegate of Colombia, Mr. Yepes, expressed the desire to introduce an amendment as was also done on behalf of the Brazilian delegation. A resolution comprising four articles was ultimately approved harmonizing the several points of view. This resolution was later adopted in the plenary session of February 18. (Appendix 62.)

The report of Mr. Ramírez (Paraguay) on the results of the Congress of Journalists was then discussed and the conclusions of the Mexican delegation on the same subject were also read. The resolution of the reporter was finally approved with the incorporation of amendments by the Brazilian and Chilean delegates. The resolution in its ultimate form encouraged the holding of periodic Congresses of Journalists and recommended to the Pan American Union the study of the establishment of a permanent journalistic organization dependent on it. The resolution was adopted in plenary session on February 3. (Appendix 24.) As to the Mexican conclusions, they were referred to the plenary session in the shape of a resolution recommending the inclusion of certain topics in the agenda of the next Congress of Journalists. The resolution was favorably acted upon at the plenary session of February 3. (Appendix 25.)

The report of Mr. Laurentino Olascoaga (Argentina) relative to the Mexican project for the "establishment of a Pan American Geographical Institute" (Topic 1) was considered at the fifth meeting. Objection was advanced to the use of the word "intervention" in the functions of the Institute so far as boundary disputes are concerned and to the proviso that Spanish should be the official language. Equality of votes for all nations was likewise advocated. Question was also raised concerning the phraseology to the effect that the convention should be perpetual. Whether the project should take the form of a resolution or convention was left to the next meeting. The first six articles were taken up separately and after redrafting were approved. Upon the motion of Mr. Ortiz (Cuba) it was agreed that the name of the Institute should be altered to read, "Pan American Institute of Geography and History."

At the sixth meeting of the committee consideration was resumed of the project for a Geographical Institute. All the articles in original or modified form, and with some omission, were finally approved, it being agreed that the first eleven articles should take the form of a convention and the remaining articles be considered as the statutes or by-laws of the Institute. The project of convention was subsequently adopted in the plenary session of February 7. (Appendix 27.)

The Mexican resolution concerning the "Publication of geodetic maps, etc.," these to follow the Mexican system (Topic 3), was likewise approved in committee and later adopted in the plenary session of February 7. (Appendix 28.)

The Venezuelan proposal for the organization of an American bibliography was approved in committee and in the plenary session of February 7. (Appendix 29.)

The seventh meeting opened with the discussion of the Panaman proposal for the completion and publication of the Dictionary of Construction and Regimen of the Spanish Language compiled by Rufino J. Cuervo, the cost to be divided among the Spanish-speaking countries. Much laudatory comment was made with regard to the project. A most agreeable impression was created by the motion of Mr. Wilbur that a proviso be incorporated which would permit the acceptance of voluntary contributions towards the expense of the work from private scientific or literary associations in the United States. The Haitian and Brazilian delegates desired that the same privilege be granted to their countries and in the amended form of the proposal this recommendation was incorporated in Article III. The resolution as approved in committee and adopted in the plenary session of February 15 appears in Appendix 37.

Debate was then initiated on the report of the Argentine delegate, Mr. García Arias, concerning Topics 5, 6, 7 and 8. The reporting delegate advocated that the establishment of scholarships and other matters falling within the agenda in question should be entrusted to an Institute of Intellectual Cooperation to be formed. Considerable difference of opinion developed both as to the form of resolution designed to create the institute and as to the manner of incorporation of the reports on the subject which had been submitted by Mr. Callorda (Uruguay), Mr. García (Mexico), and Mr. Medina y Sobrado (Cuba), as well as the results of the work of the International Institute of Intellectual Cooperation.

The discussion of Topics 5, 6, 7, and 8 was continued at the eighth meeting. Since it was evident that the debate would be without fruitful issue the chairman of the committee was authorized to appoint a subcommittee to study the matter. The committee also resolved in principle to create an Inter-American Institute of Intellectual Cooperation. The subcommittee named consisted of Mr. García Arias (Argentina); Mr. Wilbur; Mr. Collor (Brazil); Mr. Callorda (Uruguay); and Mr. Zaldumbide (Ecuador).

On February 11, the subcommittee, with the exception of the Brazilian delegate, met. Mr. Wilbur drew up a draft of resolution on the subject which reconciled divergent opinions. It was approved in substance by the subcommittee.

The above draft of resolution was laid before the ninth meeting of the committee but was immediately objected to by Mr. Collor (Brazil) on the ground that he had not received notice to attend the subcommittee meeting.

Because of the objection of the Brazilian delegate, the subcommittee met again on February 14. At that meeting the first draft of resolution on the subject was redrafted and approved for submission to the committee. The resolution was approved by the committee with only slight modification, and adopted in the plenary session of February 18. (Appendix 65.)

The report of the Bolivian delegate relative to the revision of the Buenos Aires copyright convention was then taken up article by article. On the motion of Mr. Collor (Brazil), the phraseology suggested by the reporter of Article 2 of the convention was altered to read in part, "as well as the arts applied to any human activity whatever," instead of the originally recommended reading, "as well as the arts applied to industry." From the same article was stricken the phrase "radiophonic broadcasting." With these alterations, Article 2 was approved.

Articles 3, 5, 6, and 13 were approved and the revision of Article 4 (third paragraph) suppressed. Thanks in part to the intervention of Mr. Wilbur, Article 16 was approved subject to reservations by Chile in so far as the revision conflicts with Chilean law. At the plenary session of February 18, the convention was adopted. (Appendix 8.)

The Bolivian resolution was also approved with slight modification (being subsequently adopted in the plenary session of February 18), recommending to the Pan American Union that in inserting in Conference programs subjects relating to revision of treaties, it undertake the preparation of the necessary technical studies. (Appendix 63.)

The previously introduced resolution of Salvador concerning the exercise of vigilance by the Governments regarding the production or exhibition of offensive motion-picture films was also approved, subject to the negative vote of Paraguay, and was adopted in the plenary session of February 18. (Appendix 64.)

There were also approved in the committee and adopted in the plenary session of February 18 two resolutions proposed by the Bolivian delegation. The first recommended to the nations the inclusion in primary instruction of the rudiments of financial, economic, and social studies. (Appendix 66.) The second recommended pensioning of journalists. (Appendix 67.)

COMMITTEE ON ECONOMIC PROBLEMS

(No. 6)

Article V of the program, comprising the following topics, was assigned to this committee:

1. Uniformity of legislation on consular fees.
2. Conference of chambers of commerce and, as a part of its program, organization of an inter-American chamber of commerce.
3. International aspects of immigration problems.
4. Revision of the conventions signed at Buenos Aires in 1910 and at Santiago, Chile, in 1923, with a view to formulating changes which shall assure uniform and effective protection for trade-marks in the states members of the Pan American Union.
5. Consideration of the results of the Conference on Uniformity of Communication Statistics, which met at Lima in December 1924, in compliance with a resolution of the Fifth International Conference of American States.
6. Consideration of the results of the Standardization Conference which met at Lima on December 23, 1924, in accordance with a resolution of the Fifth International Conference of American States and the conference which will meet [met] at Washington in 1927.

The United States was represented on Committee 6 by Mr. Morrow, Mr. Judah, Mr. O'Brien, and, subsequently, by Mr. Fletcher.

The first session of the committee was held on January 19, at which time Mr. Salvador Urbina, of Mexico, was elected chairman and Mr. Felipe Espil, of Argentina, vice chairman. At the second meeting, which took place on January 21, Mr. Enrique Hernández Cartaya, of Cuba, was appointed reporter on Topic 3 (Immigration); Mr. Colón Eloy Alfaro, of Ecuador, reporter on Topics 1, 5, and 6 (Consular fees; Uniformity of statistics; and Standardization); Mr. Espil, of Argentina, was designated to report on Topic 4 (Trade-marks), and Mr. Juan Vicente Ramírez, of Paraguay, was appointed reporter of Topic 2 (Chambers of commerce). Mr. Eduardo Alvarez, of Salvador, was designated general reporter.

The report on "Uniformity of consular fees," expanded with the approval of the committee to include the subject "Simplification and standardization of consular procedure," was not acceptable to the committee, and was referred, together with the amendments proposed by the American, Cuban, and Mexican delegations, to a subcommittee. The report of the subcommittee was accepted and subsequently, on February 15, approved in plenary session. (Appendix 38.) The resolution approves the conclusions of the Pan American Commission on Consular Procedure and recommends a second meeting thereof.

The report on "Chambers of commerce" was approved by the committee with but little discussion, and was also approved in plenary session on February 3. (Appendix 26.) It recommends that the Fourth Pan American Commercial Conference shall devote special study to the development of relations among the commercial organizations of the American states.

The report on "Immigration" was discussed at great length during several sessions, and it was finally agreed that it should be referred to a subcommittee, together with certain amendments and reservations that had been presented by the Brazilian, Mexican, Salvadoran, and Ecuadoran delegations. The report of the subcommittee was approved by the committee and approved in the plenary session of February 15. (Appendix 39.) The discussions of the immigration question indicated the desire that there be declared in general terms the policy of the American Republics with respect to the subject—especially in view of the conference about to be held in Habana—and the Brazilian amendments to the report were drawn up with that end in view. The subcommittee report on immigration embodied the amendment proposed by the Brazilian delegation relative to the jurisdiction of the receiving country over the immigrant; the Mexican amendment referring the question to the Second International Conference on Emigration and Immigration and suggesting certain measures with respect to the protection of immigrants; and the Salvadoran amendment to the effect that no American state may place obstacles in the way of emigration and immigration between the American states. The American delegation voted affirmatively with respect to Articles 1 and 3 of the report and negatively with respect to Articles 2, 4, and 5. During the discussions Mr. Fletcher stated that:

The delegation of the United States desires in connection with this resolution to state that the Government of the United States considers that the control of immigration is a matter of purely domestic concern, representing the exercise of a sovereign right and that, as far as the United States of America is concerned, the authority of its Congress in immigration matters is exclusive.

This statement was repeated by Mr. Fletcher in plenary session when the Conference considered the report of this committee.

The report on "Trade-marks" presented by the Argentine delegate, Mr. Espil, met with the general approval of the committee. The report recommended that a special conference be convoked to deal with the subject. The United States delegation announced that it was prepared to deal with the matter at the present time, having brought to Habana specially qualified technical advisers for the purpose; and it presented in writing certain recommendations for the consideration of the committee which were not accepted. The Argentine report was approved, and was subsequently adopted in plenary session on February 15. (Appendix 36.)

In the absence of the necessary material the reporter did not present a report on Topic 5, "Uniformity of communication statistics." Accordingly it was decided by the committee that this subject should be submitted to the Pan American Union, to be referred by it to a commission of experts which shall prepare an inter-American convention on statistics of maritime, fluvial, land, and aerial communications. The resolution to this effect was approved at the plenary session of February 18. (Appendix 55.)

A report on "Standardization" was prepared, but in view of certain amendments that had been proposed it was referred to a subcommittee. The subcommittee eventually submitted a memorandum prepared by the Mexican delegation, which the committee approved in lieu of the original report. It later was approved, on February 15, in plenary session. (Appendix 49.)

In addition to the foregoing subjects, which comprise the actual program of this Committee, the following new matters were dealt with and approved by the Committee:

(a) A proposal by the Salvadoran delegation urging the delegations to interest themselves in the adoption by their respective countries of the metric decimal system. This proposal, which was approved in the plenary session, appears in Appendix 50.

(b) A proposal relative to "Continental agricultural cooperation." The original report by the Paraguayan delegation, together with amendments suggested by the Dominican and Ecuadoran delegations, was referred to a subcommittee. The subcommittee report which was approved by the committee and subsequently by the Conference recommends that the various proposals relating to agricultural cooperation be referred to the Pan American Union, in order that the Union after consideration might refer them for study: (1) to the Seventh International Conference of American States; (2) to a conference of experts; (3) to the next Pan American Commercial Conference, or (4) dispose of them in the manner deemed most convenient. (Appendix 57.)

(c) A resolution submitted by the Mexican delegation, recommending that the countries which have already adopted the metric decimal system should adopt as a new unit of measure the hectare-meter, equivalent to 10,000 cubic meters. This resolution was approved at the plenary session of February 18. (Appendix 56.)

(d) A resolution introduced by the Salvadoran delegation, recommending that the American Governments study the question of a uniform currency, was referred to the Committee on Initiatives, which approved it. It was later approved in plenary session. (Appendix 35.)

COMMITTEE ON SOCIAL PROBLEMS

(No. 7)

The Committee on Social Problems, on which the United States was represented by Mr. Scott and Mr. Wilbur, with Mr. Long as technical adviser, dealt with Article VI of the program. Mr. Arístides Agüero (Cuba) was elected chairman; Mr. Rafael A. Arraiz (Venezuela) vice chairman; Mr. Fernando González Roa (Mexico) general reporter; and the following technical advisers special reporters for the subjects indicated after their names:

1. J. D. Long (United States): Pan American Sanitary Code.
2. Federico Torralbas (Cuba): Principles and Procedure in Public Health Administration.
3. Domingo Ramos (Cuba): Eugenics and Homoculture.
4. Afranio do Amaral (Brazil): Conference of Directing Heads of Public Health Services.
5. Francisco de P. Miranda (Mexico): Pan American Red Cross.

The topics contained in Article VI of the program were as follows:

1. Consideration of the action taken by the American states in complying with the recommendations of the Fifth International Conference of American States on the Pan American maritime sanitary code.
2. Consideration of the action taken by the American states in complying with the resolution on principles and procedure in public-health administration approved by the Fifth International Conference of American States at its session of April 16, 1923.
3. Consideration of the results of the Conference on Eugenics and Homoculture which will meet [met] at Habana in 1927, in compliance with a resolution of the Fifth International Conference of American States.
4. Consideration of the results of the Conference of Directing Heads of Public Health Services which was held at Washington in September 1926, in compliance with a resolution of the Fifth International Conference of American States.
5. Consideration of the action taken by the countries of America for the organization and development of national Red Cross societies, and the results of the Pan American Red Cross Conference referred to in the resolution adopted by the Fifth International Conference of American States on April 12, 1923.

In order to formulate proposals with respect to each of these topics, the special reporters requested that the delegates present suggestions and reports of progress achieved in public health in their respective countries.

The material thus collected was reorganized and presented in a condensed form as resolutions which were unanimously adopted without modification.

The resolutions:

(1) Recommended ratification of the Pan American Sanitary Code by those countries that have not yet ratified; (2) recommended continued application of the principles and procedures in public health administration, in view of the benefit already derived from their application; (3) recommended the formation of capable sanitary personnel through (a) training in special schools and (b) the formation of a professional sanitary organization, whose officers will be entitled to promotion on merit, fixed tenure of office, and retirement on pension; (4) recommended that the Ninth Pan American Sanitary Conference establish general bases for the training and formation of the sanitary personnel previously mentioned; (5) recommended that Governments send technical advisers to future conferences; (6) requested the Governments to send reports on progress achieved in public health since previous conferences; (7) recommended that when specialized sanitary personnel are created, a corps of graduated and registered public health visiting nurses be included and unqualified personnel should not be employed; (8) recommended the establishment of interchange of specialists in public health between countries; (9) recommended that the Pan American Sanitary Bureau study types and standards used in the preparation of biologic products so that the Ninth Pan American Sanitary Conference may obtain uniformity in their preparation; (10) recommended that the Pan American Sanitary Bureau make known the fact that a Spanish edition of the 10th revision of the United States Pharmacopœia is now available; (11) took note of the conclusions of the First Pan American Conference on Eugenics and Homoculture and recommended that the various countries study and apply such portions as they may deem convenient; (12) recommended that the Ninth Pan American Sanitary Conference and the Second Pan American Conference on Eugenics and Homoculture study the best method of combining their functions and authorized the office of Eugenics and Homoculture to continue to function in the meantime; (13) recommended that those American countries which have no technical representatives for the examination of emigrants in the country of origin utilize the services of representatives of other countries; (14) took note of conclusions of First Pan American Conference of Representatives of Public Health Services; (15) recommended that future conferences of Representatives of Health Services deal preferentially with interchanges of experiences and ideas relative to sanitation on account of the value of such interchanges and of their utility in preparing programs for future sanitary conferences; (16) recommended that an official representative of the Pan American Sanitary Bureau attend future conferences of Public Health Representatives; (17) called attention to the importance of work performed by the Pan American Red Cross; (18) expressed pleasure at the results obtained from the Pan American Red Cross Conferences of 1923 and 1926 and recommended that the American Governments lend their aid to the Third Pan American Red Cross Conference to be held at Rio de Janeiro; (19) recommended that the Pan American Union continue to cooperate with the Red Cross in America.

The texts of the resolutions above referred to appear in Appendices 18-23.

In addition, motions or resolutions were adopted by the committee:

- (1) Thanking Mr. Enrique Monterrubio, legal adviser to the Mexican Department of Health and technical adviser of the Mexican delegation, for valuable collaboration in the preparation of resolutions;
- (2) Authorizing the chairman to address a letter to the Committee on Initiatives inviting attention to the fact that the Fifth Conference, held at Santiago, Chile, had approved a resolution which provided that all future conferences should have a Committee on Hygiene and recommended that the name of the committee be changed accordingly.
- (3) Requesting the Committee on Initiatives, in the interest of efficiency and to avoid unnecessary debate in plenary sessions, to advise other committees to refer to this committee all resolutions or reports having relation to the program on social problems, especially such matters as public health, hygiene, immigration in its sanitary aspects, the Pan American Sanitary Bureau, the Pan American sanitary code, frontier police, and kindred subjects.
- (4) Providing for a public demonstration of homage and respect to the memory of Dr. Carlos J. Finlay, deceased, a Cuban physician, who had, through his studies, experiments and investigations, shown the method of the transmission of yellow fever through the agency of the mosquito, and thereby contributed largely to its eradication from the Americas.

The committee completed its program at its session of January 30, 1928, and recessed subject to the call of the chairman. All resolutions were unanimously approved without modification by the plenary session of the Conference held February 3, 1928.

COMMITTEE ON TREATIES, CONVENTIONS, AND RESOLUTIONS
(No. 8)

The Committee on Treaties, Conventions, and Resolutions, on which the United States was represented by Mr. Judah and Mr. Morrow, dealt with the single topic comprising the seventh article of the agenda of the conference:

Submission by the delegates and consideration by the Conference of reports on the action taken by the states represented at the previous Pan American Conferences on the treaties, conventions, and resolutions adopted at said conferences.

At the first meeting of the committee Mr. Ricardo Pérez de Alfonseca (Dominican Republic) was elected chairman. Mr. Santiago Key Ayala (Venezuela) was chosen vice chairman and Mr. Alejandro Alvarez (Chile) was designated reporter. At the second meeting Mr. Alvarez indicated that he would be unable to accept the office of reporter, and Mr. Tulio M. Cestero (Dominican Republic) was thereupon elected.

It was decided that the work of the committee was merely informative. A resolution was adopted requesting the various delegations represented at the Conference to submit reports on the action taken by their respective countries on the treaties, conventions and resolutions adopted at previous conferences. On the basis of these reports the reporter prepared a statement reviewing the action that had been taken on the recommendations of previous conferences, and concluding with a draft of resolution recommending that the Republics inform the Pan American Union of the reasons for non-compliance with the resolutions of previous conferences that had not been acted upon. This resolution was adopted in the plenary session of the Conference and appears in Appendix 75.

COMMITTEE ON INITIATIVES

This committee, on which the delegation of the United States was represented by Mr. Hughes, held four sessions, the first on January 27, 1928. Mr. Bustamante, President of the Sixth International Conference of American States, was elected chairman of the committee.

At a preliminary meeting of chairmen of delegations it was decided that the sessions of the Conference and the committees should be public, with the reserved right of the committees to provide for executive sessions if they so desired. This was approved by the Conference.

New projects were submitted to this committee for approval before being dealt with by the Conference. These were the following:

- Argentine proposal for the regulation of water power;
- Bolivian proposal for the civil and political rights of women;
- Bolivian project for obligatory leave of absence for prospective mothers;
- Bolivian project for the limitation of the indemnity paid by a state for land when used for public works;
- Proposal by the United States regarding theft and pilferage of cargoes at ports;
- Mexican proposal regarding standards of living of laborers and the inclusion of this subject in the agenda of the Seventh International Conference of American States;
- Salvadoran proposal for a conference on pedagogy;
- Proposal for a memorial to Dr. Carlos J. Finlay;
- Mexican proposal for plant sanitation;
- Brazilian proposal for a longitudinal highway across South America;

- Paraguayan proposal regarding agriculture, forestry, and animal husbandry;
- Ecuadoran proposal regarding the simplification of consular procedure.
- Salvadoran proposal for the study by the various states of a common coin for all.

In addition this committee set the time and date for the plenary sessions, recommended that February 20 be the date for the close of the Conference, and further recommended that the Seventh Conference be held at Montevideo, the capital of Uruguay.

CONCLUSION

The Conference held ten plenary sessions, approved and signed eleven conventions, sixty-two resolutions, seven motions (mociones), and four agreements (acuerdos), the English and Spanish texts of which appear in the Appendix. The minutes of the plenary sessions and of the meetings of the committees of the Conference will be prepared by the Government of Cuba for distribution to the participating Governments, and will be available in due course.

The delegates of the United States desire to avail themselves of the opportunity to place on record their appreciation of the many courtesies enjoyed during their sojourn at Habana, and especially the generous hospitality of President Machado, Mr. Martínez Ortiz, Secretary of State, and other members of the Cuban Government.

The delegates were most fortunate in having the benefit of the advice of Mr. Francis White, Assistant Secretary of State, who was at Habana for the entire period of the Conference; and also in having as technical advisers and assistants Messrs. Muñoz, Joaquin Servera, Richard K. Kenna, and Miss Margaret M. Hanna.

The secretarial work of the delegation was exceptionally well done under the direction of Mr. Cord Meyer, assisted by Messrs. William P. Cresson, Matthew E. Hanna, Walter C. Thurston, Copley Amory, jr., and Harold L. Williamson, and a competent corps of clerks and stenographers, to all of whom the delegation desires to express its cordial thanks and appreciation.

Second. To direct that each subject submitted to the Conference be referred to the proper committee, unless by a vote of two thirds of the delegates then present it shall be decided to proceed to its immediate consideration.

Third. To concede the floor to the delegates in the order in which they may have requested it.

Fourth. To decide all questions of order raised during the debates of the Conference. Nevertheless, if any delegate shall so request, the ruling made by the Chair shall be submitted to the Conference for decision.

Fifth. To call for votes and to announce the result of the vote to the Conference, as provided for by article 15.

Sixth. To announce to the Conference, through the secretary, at the close of each meeting the business to be discussed in the following meeting. But the Conference may make such changes as it may deem advisable, either as regards the time of the meeting or as to the order in which the pending business shall be discussed.

Seventh. To direct the secretary, after the approval of the minutes, to lay before the Conference such matters as may have been presented since the last meeting.

Eighth. To prescribe all necessary measures for the maintenance of order and the strict compliance with the regulations.

Each committee will elect from among its members a chairman and vice chairman.

The chairman of each committee shall appoint a reporting delegate to present general antecedents and conclusions; and, if it be deemed desirable, one or more special reporting delegates to explain the different aspects of the question under consideration and propose conclusions which they may consider advisable. The chairman, the general reporting delegate, and the special reporting delegates will in every case take measures to assure that the proposals which may be formulated bear proper relation to one another.

A report having been adopted by the committee, the chairman of the committee shall designate a reporting delegate to draw up the report in definitive form for the approval of the committee and to present it to the Conference. The chairman of the committee may be designated as reporting delegate, and in any case he shall assist the reporting delegate during the discussion of the plenary session.

The minority group of a committee shall have the right to designate a reporting delegate to present its views to the Conference.

ART. 8. Delegates may attend the meetings of all committees and participate in their debates, but they shall have no right to vote.

ART. 12. When the president shall have submitted for discussion the subjects contained in the order of the day, the Conference shall first discuss them in a general way, and those approved shall be the object of a second discussion in detail, taking up one by one the articles contained in the project under discussion.

ART. 13. The Conference may by a two-thirds vote of the delegations present suspend the rules and proceed to the immediate discussion of a motion, which shall at once be discussed in general and in detail.

APPENDIX 2

ADDRESS OF HIS EXCELLENCY GENERAL GERARDO MACHADO Y MORALES, PRESIDENT OF CUBA

January 16, 1928

YOUR EXCELLENCY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, DELEGATES: Intense is our joy and complete our faith in the future destinies of our hemisphere when, gazing over this hall, adding brilliancy to this transcendental occasion, we behold the illustrious person of His Excellency Calvin Coolidge, Chief Executive of the greatest of all democracies; head of the great people whom Cuba had the honor of seeing at her side in her bloody struggle for independence, which she enjoys without limitation, as stated in the joint resolution of April 20, 1898, honorably applied and inspired by the same ideals set forth in the ever famous Declaration of Independence of North America, liberty's greatest monument and gospel of rights of man and countries; and the select group of distinguished persons who constitute the delegations of the nations of America, which, throughout a century, have contributed with intense activity to the welfare of the world and to the great progress of its latest historical period. I offer to all of you the effusive greetings of the people of Cuba whom I have the honor of representing on this solemn occasion; to your peoples I express fervent wishes for their prosperity and greatness and, to your Chiefs of State, the prophecy that, as a product of this new gathering of all Americans, we may complete, during their incumbencies, that which constitutes our common aspiration, the rule of Peace and Justice.

The representatives of the American Republics gather once more with the practical purpose of the consolidation of a mutual, beneficial, and positive brotherhood, both in spirit and in interests. The International American Conference, initiated at Washington thirty-nine years ago, and continued at Mexico, Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires, and Santiago de Chile, again meets to toil for the welfare and glory of this hemisphere, root of a new humanity and crucible of a new civilization.

Cuba is proud of your presence in her Capital for the celebration of such an extraordinary event. Regarding myself I have never felt as much pleasure as I do on these solemn moments in which I behold my country as the seat of an assembly that, animated by the most serene conciliatory spirit, directs its efforts towards the approximation, development, and strengthening of the spiritual and material bonds between states that have been destined for fraternal love by geography and history.

Pan-Americanism is a constructive work that does not imply antagonisms but, on the contrary, cooperates for universal peace, for a better understanding amongst all peoples; towards the spiritual and moral unity of the nations of the world; that if in any manner it wishes to signify itself, it is in the desire of being placed at the front, bearing in mind that in international life, greatness should not be judged by standards inspired by admiration for brute force, but by the efforts of each nation within the scope of civilization.

Pan-Americanism is not merely the result of covenants, treaties, or noble institutions; it is also, and primarily, public spirit, will of the people, and collective ideal.

This public spirit, this will, and this ideal, must be molded on the progress made in individual fields, considering that the victim deserves respect and the aggressor condemnation; regard and affection, the country that in constant labor, carries its valuable contribution towards collective well-being; admiration, the state that places at the service of the common cause of progress, its daily efforts, civic activity, hopes, and aspirations. The great principle of cooperation must substitute the idea of separation of interests. Pan-Americanism is the synthesis of all principle of good that rises from the life of the individuals to that of the states.

It is not my purpose to suggest rules of conduct to such an illustrious assembly, but, if I am permitted to express the sentiments of my people, I will say to you that Cuba, one of the last republics to join this family of nations, aspires, with the faith of a novice, to see this hemisphere as the exponent of the most sincere cordiality; of the firmest union; to see the nations here represented, though politically separated, united in the common name of America; some, not allowing their control by unjustified prejudices that may reveal impotence, and others, any demonstration that might result in an involuntary threat; that we may feel the magnificent effect of our common traditions and see, with clear vision, the great enterprise that the future expects from our countries and our men, while maintaining our love for the countries of our respective births and paying them due homage, for which no sacrifice is excessive, no matter how great it may be.

The constitution of the Pan American Union upon a juridicial foundation; the codification of the generally accepted principles of international law; the consideration of the results of the technical conferences held with specific aims: of communications, customs, sanitation, etc., and the promotion of more profitable economic relations, constitute a beautiful program that may meet the aspirations of our peoples.

The work outlined will not be difficult if we direct our thoughts towards good with the determination of being useful to humanity and not to one continent.

Nothing nor no one can now oppose the tide that impels the destinies of the Western Hemisphere towards its definite brotherhood under the shelter of the juridicial standards that are indispensable for the maintenance of peace. If we reach that end in the Sixth International American Conference, and a similar aim prevails in the minds and souls of all here present, this alone will be sufficient to mark the meeting of your assembly at Habana as a brilliant milestone in the annals of modern international life.

All of you feel the desire to find basic formulas that will harmonize the common interests of all Americans. Peace through the absolute preponderance of Justice, without which happiness is not possible, neither among individuals nor amongst nations; justice secured upon adequate resolutions freely accepted by all nations, without discrimination.

But I have not come here to state axioms already accepted by all. It is sufficient for me to express that this nation has directed and directs all her energies towards the fruitful labors of peace, order, liberty, and progress, upon which her glory rests, and if success has crowned her efforts, it is due to that spirit of admiration that she had at birth for all lands of America and for those nations that preceded her in the conquest of independence which constitutes the supreme good of all countries. A free nation she, to-day, offers you her hospitality and, in her name, I say to you that in her bosom you will find the warmth of the hearth, the shelter of the ally, and the love of the fellow-citizen.

Delegates; receive my welcome, my prophecy of success and my encouragement for victory!

ADDRESS OF HIS EXCELLENCY CALVIN COOLIDGE, PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

January 16, 1928

MR. PRESIDENT AND MEMBERS OF THE PAN AMERICAN CONFERENCE: No citizen of any of the Americas could come to the Queen of the islands of the West Indies without experiencing an emotion of gratitude and reverence. These are the outposts of the new civilization of the western hemisphere. It was among them that the three small ships of the heroic Admiral came when, with the assistance and support of Spain, Columbus presented to Europe the first widespread, public, and authoritative knowledge of the New World. Other points may have been previously visited, but for these was reserved the final revelation. The Great Discoverer brought with him the seed of more republics, the promise of greater human freedom, than ever crossed the seas on any other voyages. With him sailed immortal Declarations of Independence and Great Charters of self-government. He laid out a course that led from despotism to democracy. Edward Everett Hale, a seer of New England, tells us that this gallant seaman who rose above the storms to become the forerunner of an age of pioneers,

Left blood and guilt and tyranny behind,
Sailing still West the hidden shore to find;
For all mankind that unstained scroll unfurled,
Where God might write anew the story of the World.

In the spirit of Christopher Columbus all of the Americas have an eternal bond of unity, a common heritage bequeathed to us alone. Unless we together redeem the promise which his voyage held for humanity, it must remain forever void. This is the destiny which Pan America has been chosen to fulfil.

As we look back over the accomplishments of the past four centuries, we can see that we are warranted in asserting that the Western Hemisphere has not failed in the service that it seemed destined to render to humanity. Progress does not go forward in a straight line. It is a succession of waves. We can not always ride on their crest, but among our republics the main tide of human advancement has been steadily rising. The people have taken charge of their own affairs. In spite of some temporary discouragements, they have on the whole been successful. The fertility of a virgin soil, a wealth of mineral deposits, an abundance of water power, a multitude of navigable rivers, all at the command of a resourceful people, have produced a material prosperity greater in amount and more widely distributed than ever before fell to the lot of the human race. The arts and sciences have flourished, the advantages of education are widespread, devotion to religion is marked by its sincerity. The spirit of liberty is universal. An attitude of peace and good will prevails among our nations. A determination to adjust differences among ourselves, not by a resort to force, but by the application of the principles of justice and equity, is one of our strongest characteristics. The sovereignty of small nations is respected. It is for the purpose of giving stronger guaranties to these principles, of increasing the amount and extending the breadth of these blessings, that this conference has been assembled.

The very place where we are meeting is a complete demonstration of the progress we are making. Thirty years ago Cuba ranked as a foreign possession, torn by revolution and devastated by hostile forces. Such government as existed rested on military force. To-day Cuba is her own sovereign. Her people are independent, free, prosperous, peaceful, and enjoying the advantages of self-government. The last important area has taken her place among the republics of the New World. Our fair hostess has raised herself to a high and honorable position among the nations of the earth. The intellectual qualities of the Cuban people have won for them a permanent place in science, art, and literature, and their production of staple commodities has made them an important factor in the economic structure of the world. They have reached a position in the stability of their Government, in the genuine expression of their public opinion at the ballot box, and in the recognized soundness of their public credit that has commanded universal respect and admiration. What Cuba has done, others have done and are doing.

It is a heavy responsibility which rests upon the people and the governments represented at this conference. Unto them has been given a new land, free from the traditional jealousies and hatreds of the Old World, where the people might come into the fullest state of development. It is among the republics of this hemisphere that the principle of human rights has had its broadest application; where political freedom and equality and economic opportunity have made their greatest advance. Our most sacred trust has been, and is, the establishment and expansion of the spirit of democracy. No doubt we shall make some false starts and experience some disappointing reactions. But we have put our confidence in the ultimate wisdom of the people. We believe we can rely on their intelligence, their honesty, and their character. We are thoroughly committed to the principle that they are better fitted to govern themselves than anyone else is to govern them. We do not claim immediate perfection. But we do expect continual progress. Our history reveals that in such expectation we have not been disappointed. It is better for the people to make their own mistakes than to have some one else make their mistakes for them.

Next to our attachment to the principle of self-government has been our attachment to the policy of peace. When the republics of the Western Hemisphere gained their independence, they were compelled to fight for it. They have always been a brave, resolute, and determined people, willing to make any sacrifices to defend what they believed to be their rights. But when once their rights have been secured, they have been almost equally solicitous to respect the rights of others. Their chief efforts have been devoted to the arts of peace. They have never come under the delusion of military grandeur. Nowhere among these republics have great military establishments ever been maintained for the purpose of overawing or subjugating other nations. We have all nourished a commendable sentiment of moderate preparation for national defense, believing that for a nation to be unreasonably neglectful of the military art, even if it did not invite and cause such aggression as to result either in war or in abject humiliation, must finally lead to a disastrous disintegration of the very moral fiber of the nation. But it is one thing to be prepared to defend our rights as a last extremity and quite another to rely on force where reason ought to prevail. The form of our governments guarantees us against the Old World dynastic wars. It is scarcely too much to say that the conflicts which have been waged by our republics for 150 years have been almost entirely for the purpose of securing independence and extending the domain of human freedom. When these have been accomplished, we have not failed to heed the admonition to beat our swords into plowshares.

We have kept the peace so largely among our republics because democracies are peace-loving. They are founded on the desire to promote the general welfare of the people, which is seldom accomplished by warfare. In addition to this we have adopted a spirit of accommodation, good will, confidence, and mutual helpfulness. We have been slow to anger and plenteous in mercy. When this attitude prevails it is not difficult to find practical means of adjusting differences. The statesmanship of the southern American republics has shown a peculiar skill and aptitude in this field. It began with mutual consultation. The first Pan American Congress assembled at Panamá City about 100 years ago. The purpose of that gathering has never been forgotten and it may be said to have marked the beginning of a permanent institution. The republics south of the Rio Grande have produced a most impressive record of a resort to mediation, arbitration, and other peaceful methods of the adjustment and adjudication of their international differences. A study of their treaties will disclose some of the finest examples of mutual covenants for the limitation of armaments and the avoidance of hostile conflict. In the discovery of the true principles of international relations, and in the practical ability of putting them into effect, they have demonstrated a moral power and strength of character for which the whole world should be profoundly grateful.

The Pan American Conferences meet for the purpose of maintaining and extending these important principles. It is impossible to conceive of a more inspiring motive which men could entertain in dealing with the affairs of this world. You have convened to take counsel together for increasing the domestic welfare of the free people of our independent republics and promoting international peace. No other part of the world could provide constituencies which all have such a unity of purpose. The whole atmosphere of the Conference is animated with the spirit of democracy and good will. This is the fundamental concept of your organization. All nations here represented stand on an exact footing of equality. The smallest and the weakest speaks here with the same authority as the largest and the most powerful. You come together under the present condition, and the future expectation, of profound peace. You are continuing to strike a new note in international gatherings by maintaining a forum in which not the selfish interests of a few, but the general welfare of all, will be considered.

If you are to approximate your past successes, it will be because you do not hesitate to meet facts squarely. We must consider not only our strength but our weaknesses. We must give thought not only to our excellence but to our defects. The attitude of the open mind must prevail. Most of all, you must be guided by patience, tolerance, and charity, judging your sister nations not only by their accomplishments, but also by their aspirations. A Divine Providence has made us a neighborhood of republics. It is impossible to suppose that it was for the purpose of making us hostile to each other, but from time to time to reveal to us the methods by which we might secure the advantages and blessings of enduring friendships.

Like the subjects which have occupied the attention of your predecessors, the topics contained in the agenda of the present Conference call for cooperative international action. They belong to the class of inquiries that produce closer international relations, promoting the good of all in the political, economic, social, and cultural spheres. Your predecessors have shown great wisdom in directing their attention to the matters that unite and strengthen us in friendly collaboration—subjects that develop an inter-American unity of sentiment which alone can make our common endeavors fruitful.

The existence of this Conference, held for the consideration of measures of purely American concern, involves no antagonism toward any other section of the world or any other organization. It means that the independent republics of the Western Hemisphere, animated by the same ideals, enjoying the common blessings of freedom and peace, realize that there are many matters of mutual interest and importance which can best be investigated and resolved through the medium of such friendly contact and negotiation as is necessary for cooperative action. We realize that one of the most important services which we can render to humanity, the one for which we are peculiarly responsible, is to maintain the ideals of our Western World. That is our obligation. No one else can discharge it for us. If it is to be met, we must meet it ourselves. We must join together in assuring conditions under which our republics will have the freedom and the responsibility of working out their own destiny in their own way.

The proceedings of the successive Pan American Conferences reveal a record of achievement which, without attempting the spectacular, constantly builds on the solid foundation of the immediately attainable. With each succeeding Conference the agreements for the orderly settlement of such differences as may arise between the American republics have been extended and strengthened, thus making their relationship more certain and more secure. Each Conference has contributed its share toward developing more intimate cultural ties among the nations of this hemisphere, and establishing new currents of mutual understanding. Obstacles to closer economic relations have been removed, thus clearing the pathways of commercial intercourse.

Of scarcely less importance have been the many special conferences which from time to time have assembled for the purpose of dealing with the more technical questions in the relations between the republics of America. The meetings of the International Commission of Jurists, the Pan American Highway Conferences, the Child Welfare Conferences, the Sanitary Conferences, the Conference on Consular Procedure, the Scientific Congresses, the Financial Conferences, the Red Cross Conferences, and the highly important and significant Congress of Journalists have all served to strengthen that spirit of Pan American solidarity which, in the last analysis, represents one of the greatest achievements of our American civilization and one which, in the future, is destined to play so important a part in the fulfilment of the high mission intrusted to the republics of this hemisphere.

It has been most gratifying to witness the increasing interchange of university professors and the constantly growing stream of student migration from one country to another. No other influence can be more potent and effective in promoting mutual comprehension of national aims and ideals. It is sincerely to be hoped that this cultural interchange will with each year assume larger proportions.

It is not desirable that we should attempt to be all alike. Progress is not secured through uniformity and similarity but rather through multiplicity and diversity. We should all be intent on maintaining our own institutions and customs, preserving the purity of our own language and literature, fostering the ideals of our own culture and society. In a territory reaching from the north temperate zone through the tropics to the south pole, there is room enough for every worthy activity which is profitable and every ideal which is good. Our geographical location, as well as our political ideals, has endowed us with a self-contained unity and independence. Instead of considering our variations as an obstacle, we ought to realize that they are a contribution to harmonious political and economic relations.

In this great work of furthering inter-American understanding, a large responsibility rests upon the press of all countries. In our present stage of civilization, knowledge of foreign people is almost wholly supplied from that source. By misinterpreting facts, or by carelessness in presenting them in their true light, much damage can be done. While great progress has been made toward the publication of fuller information and unbiased views, a better exchange of news service would do much to promote mutual knowledge and understanding. What happens in this hemisphere is of more vital interest to all of us than what happens across any of the oceans.

An increase of information depends largely on an increase in the means of communication. During the entire nineteenth century intercourse between the American republics was exceedingly difficult, and this isolation proved a serious obstacle to closer understanding. The twentieth century, however, and especially the last 10 years, have witnessed astonishing changes in this respect. Transportation by water has become rapid, comfortable, and relatively inexpensive. Shipping facilities from the United States have been largely improved. Our Government is greatly interested in increasing their efficiency. Railway lines have been extended so that it will soon be possible to travel with practically no interruption from the northern border of the United States to the southern border of El Salvador, and in South America from Perú to Patagonia. During very recent years every government of this hemisphere has been giving special attention to the building of highways, partly with a view to establishing feeders to the railway lines, but also to provide great arteries of inter-American communication for motor transport. On the wall of my office hangs a map showing proposed highways connecting the principal points of our two Continents.

I am asking the United States Congress to authorize sending engineering advisers, the same as we send military and naval advisers, when requested by other countries, to assist in road building. These gratifying changes are about to be supplemented by the establishment of aviation routes, primarily for the transportation of mails, which will afford to our republics a channel of interchange which will find its ultimate expression in closer cultural and commercial ties and in better mutual comprehension. Our Congress also has under consideration proposals for supporting such air routes. Citizens of the United States are considering installing them.

Private organizations of a civic, cultural, and educational character also have a great opportunity to help in the development of a closer understanding amongst the nations of America. The fine cooperation of the Red Cross Societies of the American continents is an outstanding instance of the field for service open to the civic and philanthropic organizations of this hemisphere.

In the domain of commercial relations, the last few years have witnessed an extraordinary strengthening of the economic ties binding together our republics. In both agricultural and industrial production the countries of America are now complementing one another to an unusual degree, resulting in an increasing exchange of commodities. Furthermore, recent years have witnessed a most gratifying rise in the standards of living of the wage earners throughout the Americas. They enjoy a greater productive and earning capacity, with a consequent increase in their purchasing power which has been reflected in the growing volume of inter-American commerce, destined to become more and more important as it combines a scientific utilization of natural resources with an increasing economic power of the masses of the people. The greater a nation becomes in wealth and production, the more it has for the service of its neighbors, the larger its markets for the goods of others. The operation of natural forces, supplemented by the conscious purpose of the governments and peoples of the Americas, has increased their mutual interest in each other and strengthened the commercial ties among them.

In this work of inter-American cooperation, an important part has been played by the Pan American Union. It stands as the permanent organ of these conferences. This international organization has labored unceasingly to give effect to the treaties and resolutions adopted by the successive conferences. Its scope of usefulness is constantly being enlarged and its ability to serve the American republics is strengthened with each year that passes.

In the area of political relations the results have been no less gratifying and even more significant. It is almost impossible fully to appreciate the remarkable record achieved by the republics of America in the settlement of the differences that have arisen among them. Because of ill-defined boundaries of the sparsely settled political subdivisions of the old Spanish colonial empire, the independent states of America carved out of it fell heir to a large number of territorial disputes which, in many cases, were of an exceedingly delicate and difficult nature. It is a tribute to the spirit of good will and mutual accommodation which has dominated the relations among the nations of the Western World that most of these disputes have been settled by the orderly process of negotiation, mediation, and arbitration. The adjustment of international differences on the American continents has happily advanced to a stage at which but few questions remain unsolved. This extraordinary record of achievement places heavy responsibility upon the present generation to advance the great work that has been so auspiciously begun.

It is a high example that we have set for the world in resolving international differences without resort to force. If these conferences mean anything, they mean the bringing of all our people more definitely and more completely under the reign of law. After all, it is in that direction that we must look with the greatest assurance for human progress. We can make no advance in the realm of economics, we can do nothing for education, we can accomplish but little even in the sphere of religion, until human affairs are brought within the orderly rule of law. The surest refuge of the weak and the oppressed is in the law. It is preeminently the shield of small nations. This is necessarily a long, laborious process, which must broaden out from precedent to precedent, from the general acceptance of principle to principle. New activities require new laws. The rules for the governing of aviation are only beginning to be considered. We shall make more progress in the end if we proceed with deliberation. No doubt you will find in your discussions many principles that you are ready to announce as sound and settled rules of action. But there are certain to be other questions concerning which it is not possible at the present time to lay down a specific rule of law. This need not discourage anyone. It is rather the most conclusive evidence that the results which have been secured are not of a temporary and ill-considered nature, but a mature statement of sound and conclusive principles.

The founders of our republics sought no peculiar preferment for themselves. That same disinterested spirit which has animated the conduct of our past conferences has given the American family of nations a high place in the opinion of the world. Our republics seek no special privileges for themselves, nor are they moved by any of those purposes of domination and restraints upon liberty of action which in other times and places have been fatal to peace and progress. In the international system which you represent the rights of each nation carry with them corresponding obligations, defined by laws which we recognize as binding upon all of us. It is through the careful observance of those laws which define our rights and impose our duties that international cooperation is possible. This lays on us all a continental responsibility which none of us wishes to avoid and the fulfilment of which is one of the most important guaranties of international friendship.

While the law is necessary for the proper guidance of human action, and will always remain the source of freedom and liberty and the ultimate guaranty of all our rights, there is another element in our experience which must always be taken into consideration. We read that "The letter killeth but the spirit giveth life." Oftentimes in our international relationship we shall have to look to the spirit rather than to the letter of the law. We shall have to realize that the highest law is consideration, cooperation, friendship, and charity. Without the application of these there can be no peace and no progress, no liberty, and no republic. These are the attributes that raise human relationships out of the realm of the mechanical, above the realm of animal existence, into the loftier sphere that borders on the Divine. If we are to experience a new era in our affairs, it will be because the world recognizes and lives in accordance with this spirit. Its most complete expression is the Golden Rule.

The light which Columbus followed has not failed. The courage that carried him on still lives. They are the heritage of the people of Bolivar and of Washington. We must lay our voyage of exploration toward complete understanding and friendship. Having taken that course, we must not be turned aside by the fears of the timid, the counsels of the ignorant, or the designs of the malevolent. With law and charity as our guides, with that ancient faith which is only strengthened when it requires sacrifices, we shall anchor at last in the harbor of justice and truth. The same Pilot which stood by the side of the Great Discoverer, and the same Wisdom which instructed the founding fathers of our republics, will continue to abide with us.

ADDRESS OF THE MINISTER OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS OF CUBA, RAFAEL MARTÍNEZ ORTIZ, TEMPORARY PRESIDENT OF THE CONFERENCE

January 18, 1928

DELEGATES OF ALL THE NATIONS OF AMERICA: Seldom has the world seen a spectacle such as that which brings us together in this hall. Here are representatives of all the sovereign nations of our hemisphere, eminent public men from each of them. We have had among us, as if to place a special stamp of greatness on this occasion, the Chief Executive of the greatest democracy and the wealthiest among those which are memorable in the annals of the world, His Excellency Calvin Coolidge. Among our visitors are several who are secretaries of state and some that have occupied that position, such as the Honorable Charles Evans Hughes, whose name is bound to a document of such historical significance as the naval disarmament treaty of February 6, 1922. And this admirable aggregation of superior minds is congregated with but one desire, with but one purpose: to look, with faith in their aim and with hope in the results, for harmonious concord among peoples; of brotherhood among men; of perpetual peace among nations, making the Goddess Themis, daughter of Heaven and Earth, and beatific symbolical expression of Justice, the supreme guaranty of international relations.

To our America, gentlemen, in modern times, belongs the imperishable honor that it was her statesmen who were the first to raise their voices to demand a truce to violence, protection to arms, without hatred, without sacrificing the best social elements in cruel slaughters of fellow-beings, without carrying mourning and desolation to the home, without sowing broadcast the blind fury of the Eumenides; but, on the contrary, proclaiming through heralds of peace that only love, mutual respect, and concord ought to rule among peoples.

Simon Bolivar, immortal genius, a lion in war but with a gentle and profoundly human soul, was the first champion of fraternal harmony and of common defense for the independent states of America.

Spain was not then willing to definitely lose her overseas empire and many of the powerful states of Europe, some with hopes on the possible distribution of territory, or with the idea of obtaining commercial advantages; others alarmed by the growing strength of the American principle of "popular sovereignty" so brilliantly and completely stated in the Declaration of Independence of the United States of North America which was unanimously adopted on the 4th of July, 1776, and converted into the gospel of all our hemisphere, aspired to impose their veto on the spirit of progress that appeared radiantly as the rising sun on the other side of the sea, capable of lighting a new stage in the forward march of humanity.

Count de Oñate, Don Narciso de Heredia, Minister of State in Spain, requested all the great European powers to meet in a conference at Paris. It was the last card to be played, and Viscount Chateaubriand, Minister of Foreign Relations of Louis XVIII, sent communication after communication to the Ambassador at Madrid, the Marquis of Talaru, to encourage the Spanish Government in its hopes, in exchange for obtaining among other advantages for his country, free trade with the colonies of America. All those illusions were thwarted by the opposition of Canning, and the, perhaps at the time, audacious declaration of President James Monroe of December 2, 1823, made any revival of them impossible.

But Bolivar's thought had more scope, his vision a broader horizon. He was in advance of his time. His desire to assemble the Congress of Panamá must always be remembered in these gatherings of American countries who direct their steps toward the same end. The communication of José María Salazar, Minister of Colombia at Washington, of the 2nd of November, 1825, and which no doubt expressed the point of view of the great Liberator, contains among others these thoughts: "At Panamá the best and most opportune occasion is offered to the United States to fix some principles of international law, the unsettled state of which has caused much evil to humanity." And further: "The consideration of the means to be adopted for the entire abolition of the African slave trade, is a subject sacred to humanity and interesting to the policy of the American states." Though recalling his second declaration as not of moment in our picture of to-day, the declaration was so great and so generous that it is worthy of repeating.

But, gentlemen, history must be absolutely impartial, and in remembering Bolivar's high-minded aspiration in regard to the fraternal union of our hemisphere, it would not be just to forget another sympathetic statesman of America, Henry Clay, who was always a fervent laborer for Pan-Americanism, though perhaps with a more analytical and circumstantial spirit than Bolivar. Clay not only supported Bolivar in his principal points of view, but after 1820 he publicly expressed his hopes for the establishment of a "League of Human Liberty in America" in which "all nations from Hudson Bay to Cape Horn" could be united; not only due to the necessity of presenting, in close compact their resistance to Europe, oppressed by despotism; but also to fortify more and more, by the power of example, the moral influence of the American system, and to extend it and carry it to the constitution of a home, a refuge of liberty and of its lovers on the ground soaked with the blood of the heroes of the Revolution.

If the tender and humanitarian thought of those illustrious forerunners could not grow and give seasoned fruit, the fault was of the times; but the seed laid in the furrow did not fall on sterile soil. Those who planted it have disappeared, engulfed by the never-ceasing whirlwind of life and death, but they willed to us the duty of continuing its cultivation for our own prestige and for the hope of our descendants and all humanity.

More than fifty years passed before the appearance of a new and robust sprout of the Pan-American idea. Its initiator was the eminent James G. Blaine, Secretary of State of Presidents Garfield and Arthur, of the United States of North America. In a circular of November 9, 1881, he addressed all the governments of America, inviting them to a conference at Washington. Referring to the purposes of the President of the United States, he stated in one of his paragraphs: "He conceives that none of the governments of America can be less alive than our own to the dangers and horrors of a state of war, and especially of war between brothers."

The conference could not take place at that time, perhaps due to Mr. Blaine's retirement from the Department of State. Several years afterwards, October 2, 1889, under the administration of Benjamin Harrison, and with the same objective in view, the First International American Conference was opened at Washington, the beginning of a series, of which we inaugurate the sixth to-day. It was a very solemn occasion. Delegates from eighteen nations attended. (Cuba and Panamá did not as yet exist as independent nations.)

Among the matters to be discussed, all of capital importance, we can remember the first and seventh. They were as follows: "Measures that tend to maintain peace and promote the prosperity of the several American states"; "Arrangement and recommendation of a definite plan of arbitration for all questions, disputes, and differences that may exist or come up between the different American states, with the purpose that all difficulties and questions between said states can be terminated peacefully and prevent war."

In his short but important opening speech, the illustrious Secretary Blaine expressed himself in the following manner:

The delegates I am addressing can do much to establish permanent relations of confidence, respect, and friendship between the nations which they represent. They can show to the world an honorable, peaceful conference of eighteen independent American powers, in which all shall meet together on terms of absolute equality; a conference in which there can be no attempt to coerce a single delegate against his own conception of the interests of his nation; a conference which will permit no secret understanding on any subject, but will frankly publish to the world all its conclusions; a conference which will tolerate no spirit of conquest, but will aim to cultivate an American sympathy as broad as both continents; a conference which will form no selfish alliance against the older nations from which we are proud to claim inheritance; a conference, in fine, which will seek nothing, propose nothing, endure nothing that is not, in the general sense of all the delegates, timely and wise and peaceful.

Referring to the then existing population of our hemisphere and in which he only counted that corresponding to the independent nations, he mentioned the figure of one hundred and twenty millions of inhabitants. To-day, without counting that of Canada, which totals already over eight millions, the population of America is above two hundred and ten millions, according to the latest census. A formidable increase in less than forty years and one which makes us see in perspective the goal our nations will arrive at in a relatively short time.

The very ample discussions included all problems that could affect continental interests: Maritime and railway communications, mercantile nomenclatures, trade-marks and patents, sanitary regulations, and other matters. But the culminating subject was the "Plan of arbitration." While recommending its adoption and, after affirming that war is the most cruel, ineffectual and dangerous means for the settlement of international conflicts, the delegates solemnly recommended to all the Governments by which they were accredited, the conclusion of a uniform treaty of arbitration between the American Republics.

The City of Mexico being designated for the Second International Conference, the eminent Secretary of State of the Mexican nation, the Honorable Ignacio Mariscal, under date of August 15, 1900, sent an invitation to all the nations of the hemisphere. With a clear conception of the problem, he said:

Although an appalling pessimism declares useless all endeavors to realize among men the predominance of justice, and gives preference to might over right, it must be borne in mind that the constant assertion of sane theories and their official sanction by the Governments through agreements or declarations made by common accord, which morally bind them, notwithstanding the means to compel their observance be lacking, will create a powerful opinion aiming at extirpating the most deep-rooted evils, as has been the case with slavery and other aberrations, that it was necessary to remove in the names of reason and philosophy.

All the independent nations of America, forming at that time a group of nineteen, attended the call and the opening took place on the 22d of October, 1901. The address of the Secretary of State, Mr. Mariscal, was admirable. He expressed the purest conception of American and universal brotherhood and his words will always do honor in history to their author and his illustrious country.

He referred to the Hague Peace Conference, which took place in 1899, on the initiative of the Emperor of Russia and his Minister of Foreign Affairs, Count Mouravieff. This statesman, with a clear vision of the disaster that threatened the world by the unrestrained desire of the powers to arm themselves, had said in calling the Conference:

Economic crises, due in great part to the system of amassing armaments to the point of exhaustion, and the continual danger which lies in this accumulation of war material are transforming the armed peace of our days into a crushing burden which the peoples have more and more difficulty in bearing. It appears evident then, that if this state of affairs be prolonged it will inevitably lead to the very cataclysm which it is desired to avert, and the impending horrors of which are fearful to every human thought.

Among the many subjects discussed in the Second International Conference, let us remember the one suggested by the noted Brazilian jurist, Mr. José Higinio Duarte Pereyra, relating to the codification of public and private international law. It gave origin to the wise and erudite works continued later in that field and which will be continued in this conference that is now inaugurated. "Compulsory Arbitration" was also an interesting subject, several delegations with different points of view taking part in its debate, including Mexico, Argentina, and Perú.

The conference closed on the 31st of January, 1902, with an address by the Secretary of State of the Mexican Republic as profound as that at the opening.

The Third Conference took place at Rio de Janeiro, the beautiful capital of the United States of Brazil. It began its labors on the 23d of July, 1906, under the presidency of the Baron de Rio Branco, the eminent Minister of Foreign Affairs of that country. He referred in his speech, not only to the desire of peace for our nations, but in paragraphs of great eloquence he stated the solidarity which we ought to maintain with Europe.

Mr. Joaquin Nabuco y Araujo, an honor to our continent and a famous personage among the great statesmen of the world, was elected President.

Two nations of our hemisphere did not attend; but they were not forgotten by those present who expressed wishes for their welfare.

A notable event of this conference was the session of July 31. It met in honor of Mr. Elihu Root, Secretary of State of the North American Union. The American statesman spoke after the address of the President of the Conference. Rarely has a speech been delivered containing such a plethora of doctrines, of fundamental truths, and in so scholarly a style. A book could be written about each paragraph; each line contains a luminous idea.

The conference ended its labors on the 26th of August, with eloquent words from the Baron de Rio Branco.

The principal debates were on the subjects of the previous conferences, and, as is natural, the thorny problem of "Arbitration" was amply discussed. Regarding the results obtained, Mr. Nabuco, with sufficient reason, said that the principal purpose of these conferences, for a long time, ought to be to meet periodically until the ideals that inspire them and guide them are obtained. He added that it was necessary to allow time for the growth of a tree that was destined to live many centuries. The ideas of the great Brazilian are a precise synthesis of the slow advance of humanity towards its betterment, if this advance be measured by the ephemeral condition of the life of man.

Shortly after the Rio conference, the Second Peace Conference of the Hague took place on the 15th of June, 1907. In the instructions given to the American delegation by Secretary Root, he emphasized the importance of the reduction of armaments and the limitation of the use of force in the collection of debts. He also referred to the establishment and detailed organization of the "Permanent Court" that ought to function in that city. The chairman of the First Committee, that of "Arbitration," was the eminent philanthropist and French statesman, Mr. Leon Bourgeois. A grateful humanity must remember him with imperishable appreciation.

The principle of compulsory arbitration was accepted only in abstract. The world was as yet far from being able to arrive at concrete resolutions regarding such a complex question, in spite of the fact that there were many who foresaw the rapid formation in the European sky of the formidable tempest of 1914.

The Fourth Conference had as its seat the City of Buenos Aires, the prosperous and progressive Capital of the Argentine Republic. Twenty nations attended and its opening session took place on the 12th of July, 1910, under the Presidency of Victoriano de la Plaza, Minister of Foreign Affairs. The following are words from his address:

Fortunately all those frequent political conflicts which gave rise to such unfavorable opinions concerning the capacity of the Republics of Latin America for self-government and well ordered administration are passing away and the very nations which formerly entertained so doubtful an opinion, are now turning their eyes towards these new centers of production and wealth, whence there come so many and such varied resources for the maintenance of the industrial activity of the great manufacturing centers of the world, contributing to the cheapening and abundance of the means of subsistence.

Dr. Antonio Bermejo was elected president. These phrases are from his speech: "the states of the New World, as has been well observed, constitute a family composed of twenty-one sisters." And also these: "I understand that I am to preside over a diplomatic assembly in which each nation reserves to itself the benefit of its own vote because the decisions of the majority do not bind the minority. We have not come to discuss doctrines or make suppositions, but to leave on record the measures which public opinion in general recommends in order to assure the welfare of all."

One of the most interesting works of the conference, was that of the eleventh committee regarding "Pecuniary claims." A convention was drafted which was approved by the majority.

The resolutions regarding "Exchange of professors and students," which were adopted unanimously, had great moral significance. We must cite also the conventions regarding "Patents of invention" and "Trade-marks." Article 11 of the latter provided for the establishment of two bureaus, one at Habana and one at Rio de Janeiro. Cuba will never forget the honor accorded her. She immediately established hers, and its careful organization can be examined by the delegates.

The closing session took place on the 20th of August, 1910. Dr. Rodríguez Larreta made the address. In a burst of eloquence he asked the following question: "Why should not the nations of this continent be the heralds and movers of that wish which echoes everywhere, agitating the spirit of the popular masses in the great nations; the clamorous desire for universal peace?"

The fifth and last conference of those held had as its seat the cultured and exquisite city of Santiago, Capital of Chile, with the attendance of eighteen nations. The inaugural session took place on the 25th of March, 1923, and it offered the novelty of being opened by the President of the Republic, Mr. Arturo Alessandri. His address was sensational; the beauty of its form, magnificent; and profound its concepts. Referring to the efforts of America for the union among its component nations, he said:

It is a biological law, applicable to all organisms, small or great, which in a silent but certain and unavoidable way urges them to direct their activities in search of the elements necessary for their conservation, growth and development.

The efforts of America towards gaining the union, guarantee of security and aggrandizement, respond to that vital principle of conservation which is manifested in the tendency of all countries towards creating the fruitful relations of peace that will make them prosperous and invincible.

On the following day, Mr. Luis Izquierdo, Minister of Foreign Affairs, opened the conference. He warmly advocated the reduction of armaments "upon that just and practicable basis mentioned in the formula proposed by Mr. Hughes, the eminent statesman and peacemaker."

The learned Dr. Agustin E. Edwards, was elected president of the conference and the work in the committees immediately commenced. Among the principal ones we can mention the establishment of a "Juridical Committee" regarding the codification of international law.

The International Commission of Jurists, which met at Rio de Janeiro in April of last year, adopted projects that will be submitted to the Conference that opens to-day. Among them we find the project of "Private international law," drafted by that learned professor of our University, and judge of the Hague Court, Dr. Antonio Sánchez de Bustamante, to-day the President of the Cuban delegation.

Many other topics were discussed and to them the Minister of Foreign Affairs, Mr. Izquierdo, referred in his closing speech of May 3, 1923.

In one of its last sessions, as a result of the eloquence of Doctor Antonio Buero, the conference agreed to designate Habana as the seat of the Sixth Conference which we inaugurate on this occasion and in which I have the pleasure of expressing to the illustrious Uruguayan the appreciation of our country. I also wish to express the same sentiments to the eminent gentlemen, James Brown Scott and Leo S. Rowe, indefatigable propagandists on our continent of the Pan American concert.

The armed conflict in Europe, gentlemen, which so many had foreseen and feared, began between the Fourth and the Fifth Conferences. It was the greatest disaster of history; it surpassed all calculations. The earth has never before been soaked with so much human blood. There was no home left without tears, no family without mourning. The victims were counted by dozens of millions, and there is no city nor hamlet in the belligerent European nations, no matter how small, that does not show in memorial tablets or monuments immense lists of young men fallen in the struggle. The loss of young lives cannot be valued; it surpasses all estimates; nothing can compensate it. But immense also were the losses of capital, always significant for labor. Debts reached incalculable sums, fabulous amounts which would be sufficient to cover the world with railroad lines, roads and aqueducts, increasing the welfare and true happiness of the peoples. Even our peaceful America, isolated by two oceans, found itself carried by the whirlwind of the struggle. She sent overseas millions of her sons, not only to carry the elements of war, but also to take with them the formidable force of their ideals.

President Wilson's Fourteen Points will, in history, always be the bright stars that showed to the world the end of the storm, in that gloomy and apocalyptic night of the human conscience.

Perhaps some nations of the Old Continent may look with doubt upon these gatherings in the Western Hemisphere; but America does not seek progress for her exclusive use; she seeks it for the whole world. If we succeed in solving the problem before us, it is a fact that it would be an inestimable contribution towards arriving at the same result in Europe. We are cooperators, not rivals; for if America sacrificed thousands of her sons on the battlefields so that justice might prevail, she can well lend the aid of her efforts, with the purpose of obtaining the victory of the same cause in the bloodless field of ideals and peaceful methods.

Delegates, you are about to begin your labors; the program of the Conference, drafted with the help of all minds, permits the hope for excellent results. Let us bear in mind that nothing stable can be founded on hate, ambition, or rivalry. You are going to work for the future more than for the present. If you succeed in taking a forward step; if the whole world, that beholds you, finds hope in our resolutions the book of immortality will be opened to you. You have faith and also perseverance: success must be with you.

In the name of Cuba, happy to have you as her guests, I greet you and express firm and fervent wishes for the prosperity and happiness of the twenty sister nations that you represent.

ADDRESS OF ALEJANDRO LIRA, CHAIRMAN OF THE CHILEAN DELEGATION

January 18, 1928

MR. SECRETARY OF STATE: It is a very high honor for the representative of the Republic of Chile to return to you, in the name of the delegations of America to the Sixth International Conference of American States the cordial greeting, so eloquently expressed through you by the Government and the people of Cuba, in welcoming and tendering to us the hospitality of this privileged country.

Indeed, the happy initiative of which your excellency has reminded us, taken by the brilliant orator and able diplomat of the Republic of Uruguay, Doctor Buero, when in the Fifth Conference he moved that Habana be chosen as the seat of this august assembly, deserves our warmest applause. Here, in the peaceful and pleasant atmosphere of this city, full of memories and beauties—which reveal to us in its buildings, fortress, and monuments, as well as in its gardens, parks, and avenues, the greatness of its past and the culture of its present—will pass, quiet and serene, the hours devoted by the representatives of the twenty-one Republics of the Western Hemisphere to the labor of fixing by agreements the condition of life, of progress and of justice which, taking a deeper root in the heart of the American peoples shall render them each day greater, more respected and more sovereign in the universal opinion of the nations.

How could we feel but encouraged to undertake our work in this blessed land with such a legendary history!

Cuba, the favorite daughter of Spain, could not, of necessity, achieve political liberty without excruciating sacrifices through interminable decades of bitter struggle. Her sisters were already free but she continued united to the motherland in spite of the overwhelming aspirations of her soul, which was born to live the life of freedom. It is but to be believed that Spain consoled herself on the premature emancipation of her other daughters, while she still displayed upon her crown the Pearl of the Antilles. But Cuba, her sisters being free, could not but be free herself. And thus we see that she never ceased in her aspirations for independence from the time that the first battle cry of freedom sounded in her ears.

The present and future generations shall always remember with respect and gratitude the names of Carlos Manuel de Céspedes, Francisco Vicente Aguilera, Ignacio Agramonte, Salvador Cisneros, and many others who during the ten years' war, fought with matchless fortitude and courage for the political emancipation of their country, thus forming a brilliant constellation of heroes, noble pride of America which renders tribute of her admiration.

It was not their lot to achieve the final victory; but the fire of patriotism spread throughout the island, its light reaching across the sea to illuminate the shores of neighboring countries.

The battle cry embodied in the Montecristo Manifesto dated at Santo Domingo, March 25, 1895, and launched throughout the world by Marti and Gomez, gave birth in all sections of the Island to expeditions as if descended from heaven or risen from the earth; and shortly afterwards Gomez and Maceo were able to traverse the entire territory with their triumphant hosts joining and separating once and again successively, as if the armies commanded by them were nothing but a fiery fan opening and closing at will over the heroic flaming Island.

The eyes of America and of the world were fastened on Cuba. From all parts of the Western Hemisphere came generous soldiers to form with their brothers the sublime community of sacrifice and glory. The governments of America displayed in various ways the sympathy that they intimately felt and while the closest ones provided some immediate aid in arms and war material, from the countries of the southern extremity of the hemisphere came voices of encouragement and brotherhood.

The Maine incident hastened the climax of the struggle. The United States of America embraced the cause of Cuban independence, and after the blood of her sons mingled on the battle fields with Cuban blood, the sun of peace shone with the signing of the treaty of Paris, August 13, 1898, and the independence of Cuba was achieved.

She, a free and sovereign nation, now receives into her bosom the delegations of the other twenty republics which, with her own delegation, convene in this beautiful city of Habana to deliberate on the destinies of the great American family, whose members are inspired by identical sentiments of harmony, equality, and cooperation.

And it is pleasing to Pan Americanism to record that the Sixth International Conference of American States starts its sessions under the best of auspices; His Excellency General Gerardo Machado, Chief Magistrate of this Republic and the illustrious President of the United States, His Excellency Calvin Coolidge, have been good enough to lend special luster to the occasion by their presence at the solemn opening session.

Its program is a vast one. Juridical, social, economic, and sanitary problems as well as problems of intellectual cooperation, of transportation and communication and, in general, the most varied topics of international justice and advantage in America, will be dwelt upon.

But, however ample this program may be, the high culture of the delegates, who are an honor to their countries; the deep feelings for peace, fraternity, and solidarity among the sister republics; the nature of the questions that will be debated in this solemn gathering; the harmony of the reciprocal interests of the American nations; and the expectancy of the world, whose eyes are to-day fastened upon Habana, will render easy the task of finding the desired and happy solution of the many questions entrusted to this assembly, from which the Western Hemisphere hopes so much.

Many have been the fruits already yielded by Pan Americanism, thanks to these international conferences, to which, with ample reason, so great an importance has been attributed by the most illustrious scholars of America; although, to this day historians have not been able to agree which of the fathers of American independence first conceived the idea of calling a congress of plenipotentiaries of the new states to deliberate upon their mutual interests.

These conferences not only bring together eminent personalities of the sister republics, thus strengthening inter-American moral and economic bonds, but also have permitted the advantageous decision of various juridical and social problems, and have placed others on the way to solution in the near future; for each conference leaves a rich seed for the next, as each watering deposits in the furrow some germ of life which is to lend new and vigorous impulse to the growth of the soil.

Take at random whatever theme that has been debated at any International American Conference. It will be seen that, if a solution has not been reached, the progress toward that goal has been considerable, as His Excellency the Secretary of State made clear in his masterly address, where he recalled some of the most interesting subjects which have been broached at one or more conferences.

And what shall we say of the extensions and effects that these conferences have had both within and beyond America?

The Washington conference, held ten years before the first Peace Conference at The Hague, and the Mexico and Rio de Janeiro conferences held also prior to the Second Peace Conference, shed upon both of these conferences the vivid rays of harmony, of justice, and of solidarity among all the nations of the world. And when, after the horrible catastrophe had sent its waves of death and sorrow over Europe, mother of human culture, the highest personalities of the civilized world gathered at Geneva, to seek a remedy for all the ills that had brought mankind to the very edge of total annihilation; when Europe was subjected to such a harsh test, the Pan-American conferences contributed to those deliberations the enormous accumulation of truth, of prudence, of peace, and justice that had grown out of their international debates and agreements.

It is fitting to recall that on more than one occasion the eminent European statesmen gathered at Geneva, modified or revoked agreements already solemnly entered into, in order to conform in their decision to the experience harvested in America by the inter-American conferences. But, if we recall these feats it is not because we are vainglorious of what has been accomplished in Europe through the efforts of Pan-Americanism; for, as was said with such profound truth and wisdom by His Excellency the President of the Republic, General Machado, in his address to the inaugural session of this Conference: "Pan-Americanism is a constructive effort that does not presuppose antagonisms; but, on the contrary, cooperates toward universal peace, better understanding between all peoples, and the spiritual and moral unity of the nations of the world."

Within this hemisphere, the International American Conferences have favored or agreed upon the gathering of technical and scientific congresses, to elucidate the most diverse matters affecting the general interest of the world, and the particular benefit of America. The economic and financial conferences deserve special mention. They have given consideration to statistics on communications, standardization, banking problems, commercial aviation, and, in general, to mercantile questions in this hemisphere. Also the conferences on sanitation which have considered various subjects of public health, having already prepared a Pan-American maritime sanitary code, and having now under consideration a general sanitary code. Recently, conferences on eugenics and child welfare have been held in this city. Five child-welfare congresses have already taken place at different American capitals. Several scientific congresses have thrown light on interesting problems covering the whole span of human knowledge, and the juridical congresses of Habana, Montevideo, and Rio de Janeiro have performed a task that America views with gratitude.

Thus, the International American Conferences have been widening their sphere of action and reaching deeper every day into the study and solution of the problems that beset and interest mankind.

There is no doubt that the present conference has the widest and most important agenda submitted up to this time to the consideration of similar assemblies. Suffice it to refer to that part of the agenda relating to international law, which has always been studied in America with the interest and affection that the wise teacher of several generations, the illustrious Bello, instilled into the youthful mind of this strong and healthy race.

The Commission of Jurists, which gathered lately at Rio de Janeiro, has prepared several drafts of conventions concerning the deepest and most transcendental matters on public international law, which will be considered by this Conference. It will also consider the codification of private international law approved by the said commission, the work of the eminent Cuban jurist, Dr.

Antonio Sánchez de Bustamante, a glory to his country which also makes all sons of America proud, for we know how to render homage to intelligence, virtue, and scholarship.

Together with these matters of international law others so interesting as the organization of the Pan American Union and measures tending to encourage and develop cultural and economic relationships between the peoples of this hemisphere, are entrusted to the study of the delegations of America, within this university, which is the alma mater of the intellectual and moral culture of Cuba.

We may rest assured that all of these problems, simple or complex, shall be solved with equanimity of mind for the good of mankind, the peace of this hemisphere, the harmony of American interests and the rule of justice over the world of Columbus. This goal we shall attain by following the path lighted for us by the lone star of the Cuban tricolor.

ADDRESS OF ANTONIO SÁNCHEZ DE BUSTAMANTE, PERMANENT PRESIDENT OF THE CONFERENCE

January 18, 1928

DELEGATES FROM ALL THE AMERICAS; LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: Profoundly grateful for my election to the office of President, which any one of you could have filled more appropriately and meritoriously than I, an office in which I propose to act towards all of you as a friend and brother, I desire to devote my first words to offering you a testimonial of my gratitude for this highest honor, which I owe to your kindness. Thinking only of me, I would have declined it as undeserved, but I accepted it, nevertheless, as a tribute of the Conference to my beloved Cuba which already has more than one lasting tie of affection with all this part of the world.

We were not yet a recognized and sovereign nation, when the Second Conference, assembled in the neighboring and beautiful Capital of Mexico, voted unanimously and by acclamation an affectionate greeting to our nascent Republic. It is for me a source of extraordinary satisfaction to express before you our appreciation of that kind distinction from the very soil of the state, then about to arise, and which last year, amid peace and security and under an admirably organized régime, celebrated the first jubilee of its independent official life.

And in Santiago de Chile, the beautiful city of the Southern Hemisphere, the Fifth Conference in its turn and after an eloquent address by the eminent Mr. Buero, delegate from Uruguay, approved by unanimous vote the proposal in pursuance of which we are now assembled in Habana and which gave occasion to warm and brilliant words of acknowledgement, spoken by our illustrious Doctor Arístides Agüero, who expressing the sentiments of the Cuban soul, transmitted to all America our deep gratitude, thus voicing faithfully the sentiments of Cuba.

Here in Cuba we feel proud of your presence and we shall always cherish as one of our greatest joys our having had as guests, and represented by most prominent men, all the republics of America.

There is assembled here to-day, without exception, the whole of the independent territory of the Western Hemisphere, and it seems appropriate that we should ask ourselves what our common action signifies and involves. There is a series of factors which in life and human history have a decisive influence in creating groups and interests that are bound together. Without anyone's having sought it in a systematic or selfish way, there is an Asiatic world, a European world and an American world with a full force of historical realities and all the hopes of a pleasing future.

During the middle of the eighteenth century, in 1748, when America was only a shapeless mass of almost unknown colonies, there was published in Europe a famous book, The Spirit of the Laws, by Baron Montesquieu. In two of its chapters the marvelous intuition of its author caused him to state that America, in its parts and in its whole was, from the standpoint of its internal life and by reason of a series of circumstances, in need of special rules of law. The first basis for this continental differentiation is perhaps to be found in geography. Asia, partly separated from Europe by mountains which during long centuries made it inaccessible, was the cradle of civilized mankind, and in her great conquering and theocratic empires was contained almost all of the history of the ancient world, until supplanted in European territory by the wonderful culture of Greece and the dominating juridical spirit of the Roman Republic and Empire. With her flourished, in those early stages of historical life, some nuclei of African forces in another great geographical division, joined to the Asiatic continent by an isthmus, in which the daring spirit of the nineteenth century traced its first change in the surface of our planet—the Suez Canal. Although the three continents are bound together by the Mediterranean Sea, geography made them independent and has conserved them in all respects, throughout the years, separate and also independent in their history.

The American Continent rose to what is known as western civilization, then ancient times and the middle ages had passed, and with its discovery it ushered in the new and wonderful modern age. It is necessary perhaps to revise those classical divisions of history, because in history the middle ages constituted the colonial period, modern times beginning at the end of the eighteenth century and continuing through the nineteenth, to develop into the splendid and incomparable twentieth century.

Geography consolidated the unity of our continent and its relative isolation. It is the only one which nature has deprived of land communication with the rest of the world, and the sea that surrounds it, so large that it cannot be called Mediterranean, narrows only in its habitable and less accessible portion. It is also the only continent which, containing all climates, touches at each end the poles of the earth. It always found in its geographical isolation a basis for its historical, political, and moral unity. Through centuries it maintained itself throughout its territory in subjection to several colonial powers, from which it won emancipation almost at the same time and in a similar manner, adopting identical or analogous forms of government with like economic needs from north to south and with the same problems to solve. It also has fixed its eyes, more or less readily, upon similar horizons leading to roads of a common and ever brilliant future.

Conscious of its rights, since 1826 it has resolved, on the wonderful impulse of Bolivar, to congregate in great assemblies wherein its means of action and its legal rules of conduct may be discussed and agreed upon—means and rules which, avoiding the insecurity of right in future disputes, may abolish with it all possible assaults upon justice and equality.

It is necessary that man should not separate what nature and necessity have united. The written law, the work of a common will and by common will acknowledged and maintained, is the strongest bond of moral unity which is needed by the international American community for its existence and development.

There is nothing incompatible between these great assemblies of sovereign peoples and the sentiment and necessities of each nation. Man is a complex being, who can and must create an organ for each need, making all such organs harmonious. He has need of personal happiness and of enjoying the sweetest perfume of life, realized in the home and in the family. He must project himself into all the spheres of activity and build, with the aggregate of families, the city—at once an attraction, a protection and a security for all. Out of groups of cities and towns, and for reasons of welfare and of geography, which continuously reappear in human destiny, he creates a region, a state, a department, or a province, and with several provinces, departments, states, or regions, he creates and consolidates the nation. Each one of these achievements is the concentration and the result of one of his cherished aspirations, as between which there are no jealousies and which though dissimilar by nature, coincide and cooperate with each other, making of him the sovereign of creation, a title which he deserves, not because he knows how to fight, but because he knows how to love. He shall retain this title only if, continuing on this road, he groups the nations in that part of the world in which he lives, into such institutional forms as shall satisfy his collective needs and which, assuring to every nation the full satisfaction of her requirements and the integral and sovereign exercise of all her rights, he may uncover a new and triumphant phase of his destinies and a new and wonderful creature of his will, of his heart, and of his intelligence.

Do not fear that this may endanger or destroy the nations which are to act as a stimulus and support of these new organizations. In such a life, as in architectural structures, each factor aids and protects the others. A superficial observer, standing before any building, would think that the roof owes everything to the columns supporting it, but the architect knows that the winds do not shake or destroy the columns, because the roof resting over them fastens them together, keeping them immovable at the same time that it protects them. So also, in international relations, each new moral tie, standing erect, is a fresh defense in the series of encouragements for freedom and right which human intelligence needs and produces.

As a fruitful achievement for the satisfaction of all legitimate interests, each bond that arises in the progressive march of solidarity among men and peoples stimulates other bonds, for these continental agreements do not impede the thought of the sacred ties of race or of other universal unions, thus converting into historical reality the phrase which centuries ago contributed to the immortality of a great Latin poet: "I am a man and nothing human can be indifferent to me."

Each individual, as also each nation, has in reserve two enormous forces which have moved humanity from the beginning of its existence—love and hate. The latter is a destructive power whose gravest manifestations are, in domestic communities, crime; and in international societies, war. The other is a constructive force, less visible but sweeter, more lasting though less blatant. With love, everything that is great on this earth, has been obtained and, defeating hate, it heals the world's wounds and everywhere spreads good and happiness.

To the end that we, the states of America, may love each other, the great factors of progress in human relations, which have been intensified during the last century and whose force of attraction must necessarily be greater among the several nations situated in the same part of the world, unquestionably cooperate. The sea ceased to hamper community life when steamboats, some of them gigantic, safely defied the elements and incredibly shortened distances; and when the submarine cables permitted the inhabitants of distant places to establish almost instant communication. The mountains surrendered to man who pierced them by tunnels, and who utilized first the railroads and then the automobile (poetically called by some one the emancipated locomotive), to speed his travels from one place to another and to turn the remote into the near, and the distant into the neighboring. The air, from which only lightning and storm had heretofore quickly come to us, is now crossed by wonderful means of transportation carrying from one point to another, with affectionate devotion, human fraternity, and also permitting that there should be hurled through space the human language, which is the music of thought, and music, which is the language of sensibility.

And man, who is born in these days a cosmopolitan being, resorts to all nations of the world for his needs, beginning with those of a purely material character, as the clothing which he wears and the food which he consumes; to those of an intellectual character, such as the words with which he expresses himself and the ideas on which he is spiritually nurtured. He must connect himself with his fellow beings, particularly those who are nearer and have greater ties with him.

It is for this reason that our program, prepared with the approval of the diplomatic representatives of the entire American World, treats of problems of communication to be facilitated by air, on the highways, on the railroads, on the rivers and the seas; of social problems such as land and maritime health, child welfare and eugenics; of benevolent activities, such as the Red Cross; of literary and artistic property; of intellectual cooperation in its various forms and activities; and above all, completing it and making it possible and facile, of the rules that are to be applied to persons, property, inheritance, contracts, commercial activities, criminal responsibility, and legal procedure among the citizens of the Americas, so as to render their mutual lives useful and pleasant; and of the principles of love to which the nations themselves should adjust their external conduct, so that they may not err when invoking or appealing to such rules, and that their living together may be for each and every one of these nations, noble and just, pleasant and free, peaceful, fruitful, and sovereign.

When the projects which we now cherish shall have been realized and when every one shall appreciate their importance, while observing them in triumphant march, the Pan American Conferences, repeated from nation to nation throughout the entire continent may well boast of having been one of the most important and powerful factors in this certain and indestructible victory of America. Let us all contribute our grain of sand to this work of giants. Let us all work united and confident, with the faith and hope of success so that all America may be for a long time one of the guides and colossi of the world maintained by the fraternal love and imperishable union of her sons for the good of our planet, at the summit of the glory and progress of mankind.

The illustrious men who, since 1889, in the conference at Washington, until 1923 in that at Santiago de Chile, have intensively labored for this splendid objective, are now legion. Many of them, fortunately, still live and will continue to help us in the work under way; but others have paid their tribute to death and the Pan American Conferences have established the noble and tender custom of rendering homage at each session to those who have departed this life since the last conference. Among such men I remember now Messrs. Willard Saulsbury, of the United States of America; Estanislao Zeballos, of the Argentine Republic; Gastão da Cunha, of Brazil; Manuel Gondra, of Paraguay; Manuel Diaz Rodriguez, of Venezuela; and José Vidal Caro, of Cuba.

Their names will remain in our records as in a commemorative tablet and their memories will endure in our spirit as a testimonial of respect and of love. This solidarity of the whole American Continent in its respect of its illustrious dead, is a confirmation of our past and future unity, never as firm as when revealing itself amidst sorrow and remembrance. Let us continue to love all that unites us and we shall have impeded, and perhaps suppressed for the future everything that may divide and separate us.

DECLARACIONES Y RESERVAS

RESERVAS DE LA DELEGACIÓN
ARGENTINA

La delegación argentina deja constancia de las siguientes reservas que formula al proyecto de convención de derecho internacional privado sometido a estudio de la Sexta Conferencia Internacional Americana.

1. Entiende que la codificación del derecho internacional privado debe ser "gradual y progresiva," especialmente respecto de las instituciones que presentan en los estados americanos, identidad o analogía de caracteres fundamentales.

DECLARATIONS AND RESERVATIONS

RESERVATIONS OF THE ARGENTINE DELEGATION

The Argentine delegation places on record the following reservations which it formulates to the project of convention of private international law, submitted to the consideration of the Sixth International Conference of American States:

1. It understands that the codification of private international law should be "gradual and progressive," especially as regards institutions which present in the American republics identical or analogous fundamental features.

2. Mantiene la vigencia de los tratados de derecho civil internacional, derecho penal internacional, derecho comercial internacional y derecho procesal internacional, sancionados en Montevideo el año 1889, con sus convenios y protocolos respectivos.

3. No acepta principios que modifiquen el sistema de la "ley del domicilio", especialmente en todo aquello que se oponga al texto y espíritu de la legislación civil argentina.

4. No aprueba disposiciones que afecten, directa o indirectamente, el principio sustentado por las legislaciones civil y comercial de la República Argentina, de que, "las personas jurídicas deben exclusivamente su existencia a la ley del estado que las autorice y por consiguiente no son ni nacionales ni extranjeras; sus funciones se determinan por dicha ley de conformidad con los preceptos derivados del 'domicilio' que ella les reconozca."

5. No acepta principios que admitan o tiendan a sancionar el divorcio ad vinculum.

6. Acepta el sistema de la "unidad de las sucesiones" con la limitación derivada de la lex rei sitae en materia de bienes inmuebles.

7. Admite todo principio que tienda a reconocer en favor de la mujer, los mismos derechos civiles conferidos al hombre mayor de edad.

8. No aprueba aquellos principios que modifiquen el sistema del jus soli como medio de adquirir la nacionalidad.

9. No admite preceptos que resuelvan conflictos relativos a la "doble nacionalidad" con perjuicio de la aplicación exclusiva del jus soli.

10. No acepta normas que permitan la intervención de agentes diplomáticos y consulares, en los juicios sucesorios que interesen a extranjeros, salvo los preceptos ya establecidos en la República Argentina y que rigen esa intervención.

11. En el régimen de la letra de cambio y cheques en general, no admite disposiciones que modifiquen criterios

2. It ratifies the force of the treaties of international civil law, of international penal law, of international commercial law and of international procedural law, approved at Montevideo in the year 1889, with their respective conventions and protocols.

3. It does not accept principles which modify the "law of domicile," especially as regards everything which opposes the text and spirit of Argentine civil legislation.

4. It does not approve provisions affecting directly or indirectly the principle upheld by the civil and commercial legislation of the Argentine Republic to the effect that "juristic persons owe their existence exclusively to the law of the state which authorizes them and are therefore neither national nor foreign; their functions are determined by said law, in accordance with the precepts derived from the 'domicile' which that law acknowledges to such persons."

5. It does not accept principles which admit or tend to approve divorces ad vinculum.

6. It accepts the system of the "unity of successions" with the limitation derived from the lex rei sitae as regards immovable property.

7. It accepts all principles tending to acknowledge in favor of women the same civil rights granted to adult males.

8. It does not approve those principles modifying the doctrine of jus soli as a means of acquiring nationality.

9. It does not accept precepts solving conflicts of "dual nationality" in a manner prejudicial to the exclusive application of jus soli.

10. It does not accept rules authorizing the intervention of diplomatic or consular agents in inheritance proceedings concerning foreigners, except such principles as have already been established in the Argentine Republic regulating such intervention.

11. As regards the regulation of bills of exchange and checks in general, it accepts no provisions which may modaceptados en conferencias universales, como las de La Haya de 1910 y 1912.

12. Hace reserva expresa de la aplicación de la "ley del pabellón" en cuestiones relativas al derecho marítimo, especialmente en lo que atañe al contrato de fletamento y a sus consecuencias jurídicas, por considerar que deben someterse a la ley y jurisdicción del país del puerto de destino.

Este principio fué sostenido con éxito por la rama argentina de la International Law Association en la 31a. sesión de ésta y actualmente es una de las llamadas "regla de Buenos Aires."

13. Reafirma el concepto de que los delitos cometidos en aeronaves, dentro del espacio aéreo nacional o en buques mercantes extranjeros, deberán juzgarse y punirse por las autoridades y leyes del estado en que se encuentran.

14. Ratifica la tesis aprobada por el Instituto Americano de Derecho Internacional, en su sesión de Montevideo de 1927, cuyo contenido es el siguiente: "La nacionalidad del reo no podrá ser invocada como causa para denegar su extradición."

15. No admite principios que reglamenten las cuestiones internacionales del trabajo y situación jurídica de los obreros en mérito de las razones expuestas, cuando se discutió el artículo 198 del proyecto de convención de derecho civil internacional, en la Junta Internacional de Jurisconsultos, asamblea de Río de Janeiro de 1927.

La delegación argentina hace presente que, como ya lo ha manifestado en la honorable comisión número 3, ratifica en la Sexta Conferencia Internacional Americana, los votos emitidos y actitud asumida por la delegación argentina en la asamblea de la Junta Internacional de Jurisconsultos, celebrada en la ciudad de Río de Janeiro, en los meses de abril y mayo de 1927.

DECLARACIÓN DE LA DELEGACIÓN DE LOS ESTADOS UNIDOS DE AMÉRICA

Siente mucho no poder aprobar desde ahora el código del doctor Bustamante, if the criteria accepted in previous world conferences, such as those of The Hague of 1910 and 1912.

12. It makes specific reservation of the application of the "law of the flag" to questions relating to maritime law, especially as regards the charter party and its legal effect, as it considers that these should be subject to the law and jurisdiction of the country of the port of destination.

This principle was successfully upheld by the Argentine branch of the International Law Association, at its 31st session and is now one of the "Buenos Aires rules."

13. It reaffirms the principle that offenses committed on airships within the national aerial domain or on foreign merchant ships should be tried and punished by the authorities and the laws of the states where such ships may be found.

14. It ratifies the thesis, approved by the American Institute of International Law at its session of 1927 in Montevideo, to the effect that "the nationality of the accused cannot be invoked as a ground for refusing his extradition."

15. It does not accept the principles regulating international labor questions or the juridical status of laborers, for the reasons it submitted at the sessions of the International Commission of Jurists of Río de Janeiro in 1927, when Article 198 of the project of convention of international civil law was being discussed.

The Argentine delegation reiterates what it has heretofore declared at the meetings of Committee No. 3, that it ratifies in the Sixth International Conference of American States the votes cast and the attitude assumed by the Argentine delegation at the sessions of the International Commission of Jurists held in Río de Janeiro during the months of April and May, 1927.

DECLARATION OF THE DELEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

The delegation of the United States of America regrets very much that it pues dada la Constitución de los Estados Unidos de América, las relaciones de los Estados miembros de la Unión Federal y las atribuciones y poderes del Gobierno Federal, se les hace difícil. El Gobierno de los Estados Unidos de América mantiene firme la idea de no desligarse de la América latina, por lo que, de acuerdo con el artículo sexto de la convención, que permite a cada gobierno adherirse más tarde, harán uso del privilegio de ese artículo a fin de que, después de examinar cuidadosamente el código en todas sus estipulaciones, puedan adherirse por lo menos a gran parte del mismo. Por estas razones la delegación de los Estados Unidos de América se reserva su voto en la esperanza de poder adherirse, como ha dicho, en parte o en una parte considerable de sus estipulaciones.

DECLARACIÓN DE LA DELEGACIÓN DE URUGUAY

La delegación de Uruguay hace reservas tendientes a que el criterio de esa delegación sea coherente con el sustentado en la Junta de Jurisconsultos de Río de Janeiro por el doctor Pedro Varela, Catedrático de la facultad de derecho de su país. Las mantiene declarando que el Uruguay presta su aprobación al código en general.

RESERVAS DE LA DELEGACIÓN DE PARAGUAY

1. Hace la declaración de que el Paraguay mantiene su adhesión a los tratados de derecho civil internacional, derecho comercial internacional, derecho penal internacional y derecho procesal internacional que fueron sancionados en Montevideo en 1888 y 1889, con los convenios y protocolos que los acompañan.

2. No está conforme en modificar el sistema de la "Ley del domicilio" consagrado por la legislación civil de la República.

is unable at the present time to approve the code of Dr. Bustamante, as in view of the Constitution of the United States of America, the relations among the States members of the Union and the powers and functions of the Federal Government, it finds it very difficult to do so. The Government of the United States of America firmly maintains its intention not to dissociate itself from Latin America, and therefore, in accordance with article sixth of the convention which permits any Government to adhere later thereto, it will make use of the privilege extended by this article in order that, after carefully studying the code in all its provisions, it may be enabled to adhere to at least a large portion thereof. For these reasons, the delegation of the United States of America reserves its vote in the hope, as has been stated, of adhering partly or to a considerable number of the code's provisions.

DECLARATION OF THE DELEGATION OF URUGUAY

The delegation of Uruguay formulates reservations to the end that its position be consistent with that held in the International Commission of Jurists at Rio de Janeiro by Doctor Pedro Varela, professor in the faculty of law at the University in Uruguay. At the same time the delegation declares that Uruguay gives its approval to the code as a whole.

RESERVATIONS OF THE DELEGATION OF PARAGUAY

DECLARATION OF THE DELEGATIONS OF COLOMBIA AND OF COSTA RICA

The delegations of Colombia and of Costa Rica subscribe to the code of derecho internacional privado de una manera global con la reserva expresa de todo cuanto pueda estar en contradicción con la legislación colombiana y la costarricense.

En lo relativo a personas jurídicas nuestra opinión es que, ellas deben estar sometidas a la ley local para todo lo que se refiera a "su concepto y reconocimiento", como lo dispone sabiamente el artículo 32 del código, en contradicción (por lo menos aparente) con otras disposiciones del mismo como los artículos 16 a 21. Para las legislaciones suscritas, las personas jurídicas no pueden tener nacionalidad ni de acuerdo con los principios científicos ni en conformidad con las más altas y permanentes conveniencias de América. Habría sido preferible que en el código que vamos a expedir, se hubiese omitido todo cuanto pueda servir para afirmar que las personas jurídicas, singularmente las sociedades de capitales, tienen nacionalidad.

Las delegaciones suscritas al aceptar la transacción consignada en el artículo 7 entre las doctrinas europeas de la personalidad del derecho y la genuinamente americana del domicilio para regir el estado civil y la capacidad de las personas en derecho internacional privado, declaran que aceptan esa transacción para no retardar la expedición del código que todas las naciones de América esperan hoy como una de las obras más trascendentales de esta Conferencia, pero afirman enfáticamente que esa transacción debe ser transitoria porque la unidad jurídica del continente tiene que verificarse en torno a la ley del domicilio única que salvaguarda eficazmente la soberanía e independencia de los pueblos de América. Pueblos de inmigración como son o habrán de ser todas estas repúblicas, no pueden mirar sin suprema inquietud que los inmigrantes europeos traigan la pretensión de invocar en América sus propias leyes de origen para gobernar aquí su estado civil de capacidad para contratar. Admitir esta posibilidad (que consagra el principio de la ley nacional, reconoprivate international law as a whole with the express reservation as to everything which may be in contradiction with the Colombian or Costa Rican legislations.

With respect to juristic persons, our view is that they should be subject to the local law as regards everything relating to their "concept and recognition," as wisely provided by Article 32 of the code, in contradiction—at least apparently—with other provisions thereof, such as Articles 16 to 21. For the undersigned delegations, juristic persons can not have any nationality either under scientific principles or in the view of the highest and most permanent interests of America. It would have been preferable that in this code which we are going to enact, there should have been omitted everything which might serve to assert that juristic persons, particularly those with capital stock, have nationality.

The undersigned delegations, upon accepting the compromise set forth in Article 7 between the European doctrine of the personality of the law and the genuinely American doctrine of domicile for regulating the civil status and capacity of persons in private international law, declare that they accept this compromise in order not to delay the issuance of this code, to which all the nations of America are looking forward as one of the most transcendental accomplishments of this Conference; but the subscribing delegations emphatically assert that such a compromise should be transitory because juridical unity must be accomplished in the continent around the law of the domicile, the only one which effectively safeguards the sovereignty and independence of the peoples of America. Immigration countries, as these Republics are or will be, cannot but regard with the greatest concern that European immigrants should bring with them the pretension of invoking in America their own laws of origin, to determine here their civil status as to contractual capacity. To cido parcialmente en el código) es crear en América un estado dentro del estado y ponernos casi bajo el régimen de las capitulaciones que Europa impuso durante siglos a las naciones del Asia, por ella consideradas como inferiores en sus relaciones internacionales. Las delegaciones suscritas hacen votos por que muy pronto desaparezcan de las legislaciones americanas todas las huellas de las teorías (más políticas que jurídicas) preconizadas por Europa para conservar aquí la jurisdicción sobre sus nacionales establecidos en las libres tierras de América y espera que la legislación del continente se unifique de acuerdo con los principios que someten al extranjero inmigrante al imperio irrestricto de las leyes locales. Con la esperanza, pues, de que en breve la ley del domicilio será la que rija en América el estado civil y la capacidad de las personas, y en la seguridad de que ella serán uno de los aspectos más característicos del Panamericanismo jurídico que todos anhelamos crear, las delegaciones suscritas votan el código de derecho internacional privado y aceptan la transacción doctrinaria en que él se inspira.

Refiriéndose a las disposiciones sobre el divorcio, la delegación colombiana formula su reserva absoluta en cuanto regula el divorcio por la ley del domicilio conyugal, porque considera que para tales efectos y dado el carácter excepcionalmente transcendental y sagrado del matrimonio (base de la sociedad y del estado mismo), Colombia no puede aceptar dentro de su territorio la aplicación de legislaciones extrañas.

Las delegaciones quieren, además, hacer constar su admiración entusiasta por la obra fecunda del doctor Sánchez de Bustamante que este código representa en sus 500 artículos concebidos en cláusulas lapidarias que bien pudieran servir como dechado para los legisladores de todos los pueblos. De hoy accept this possibility (which is sanctioned by the principle of national law, partially acknowledged in the code), amounts to creating in America a state within a state and to placing ourselves almost under the capitulation régime which Europe imposed during centuries on the nations of Asia, which she considered as inferior in their international relations. The undersigned delegations earnestly hope that very soon there will disappear from the American legislations all traces of theories (more political than legal) favored by Europe in order to preserve here jurisdiction over her nationals, who have established themselves in these free lands of America, and they hope that the legislation of the continent will be unified in accordance with the principles that subject alien immigrants to the unrestricted force of the local laws. With the hope, therefore, that very soon the doctrine of the domicile will be the one to regulate in America the civil status and capacity of persons, and feeling assured that it will constitute one of the most characteristic aspects of juridical Pan Americanism, which we are all anxious to create, the undersigned delegations vote in favor of the code of private international law and accept the doctrinary compromise on which it is inspired.

As regards the provisions relative to divorce, the delegation of Colombia formulates its unqualified reservation to the regulation of divorce by the law of the matrimonial domicile, because it considers that for such purpose and in view of the exceptionally transcendental and sacred character of marriage (basis of society and of the state itself) Colombia cannot accept the application within her territory of alien laws.

The subscribing delegations also desire to record their enthusiastic admiration for the fruitful efforts of Dr. Sánchez de Bustamante which this code embodies in its 500 articles, formulated in clear-cut phrases, which can well serve as models for the legislators of all countries. From this day on Dr.

más el doctor Sánchez de Bustamante será no sólo uno de los hijos más esclarecidos de Cuba, sino uno de los más eximios ciudadanos de la gran patria americana que puede con justicia ufanarse de producir hombres de ciencias y estadistas tan egregios como el autor del código de derecho internacional privado que hemos estudiado y que la Sexta Conferencia Internacional Americana va a sancionar en nombre de la América entera.

Sánchez de Bustamante will not only be one of the most eminent sons of Cuba, but also one of the foremost citizens of the great American fatherland which can justly feel proud of raising egregious scientists and statesmen like the author of the code of private international law which we have considered, and which the Sixth International Conference of American States is about to sanction on behalf of all the Americas.

Second Reservation: Applicable to Article 187, last paragraph:

Third Reservation: Especially applicable to Articles 327, 328, and 329:

RESERVAS DE LA DELEGACIÓN DE LA
REPÚBLICA DOMINICANA

1. La delegación de la República Dominicana desea mantener el predominio de la ley nacional en aquellas cuestiones que se refieren al estado y capacidad de los dominicanos, en donde quiera que éstos se encuentren, por lo cual no puede aceptar sino con reservas, aquellas disposiciones del proyecto de codificación en que se da preeminencia a la "ley del domicilio" o a la ley local; todo ello, no obstante el principio conciliador enunciado en el artículo 7 del proyecto del cual es una aplicación el artículo 53 del mismo.

2. En cuanto a la nacionalidad, título 1º del libro 1º, artículo 9 y siguientes, establecemos una reserva, en lo que toca, primero, a la nacionalidad de las sociedades, y segundo, muy especialmente al principio general de nuestra constitución política según el cual a ningún dominicano se le reconocerá otra nacionalidad que la dominicana mientras resida en el territorio de la República.

3. En cuanto al domicilio de las sociedades extranjeras, cualesquiera que fueren sus estatutos y el lugar en que lo hubieren fijado, o en que tuvieren su principal establecimiento, etcétera, reservamos este principio de orden público en la República Dominicana: cualquier persona física o moral que ejerza actos de la vida jurídica en su territorio, tendrá por domicilio el lugar donde tenga un establecimiento, una agencia o un representante cualquiera. Este domicilio es atributivo de jurisdicción para los tribunales nacionales en aquellas relaciones jurídicas que se refieran a actos intervenidos en el país cualesquiera que fuere la naturaleza de ellos.

DECLARACIÓN DE LA DELEGACIÓN DE
ECUADOR

La delegación de Ecuador, tiene el honor de suscribir por entero la convención del código de derecho internacional privado en homenaje al doctor

RESERVATIONS OF THE DELEGATION OF THE DOMINICAN REPUBLIC

1. The delegation of the Dominican Republic desires to maintain the supremacy of its national law in all questions relating to the status and capacity of the Dominicans wherever they may be, and for this reason it cannot accept, except with reservations, those provisions of the project of code which accord supremacy to the "law of the domicile" or to the local law: all this notwithstanding the conciliatory principle set forth in Article 7 of the project and of which Article 53 of the same is an application.

2. As regards nationality, Title I, Book I, Articles 9 et seq., we formulate a reservation with respect, first, to the nationality of juristic persons, and second, in a special manner, regarding the general principle of our political constitution in accordance with which no other nationality shall be acknowledged to any Dominican citizen except that of the Dominican Republic as long as he resides in its territory.

3. With reference to the domicile of foreign juristic persons, whichever may be their charters and whatever the place where they may have established their domicile, wherever their principal office may be located, etcetera, we make reservation of the following principle of public order in the Dominican Republic: any physical or moral person conducting activities of a juridical nature within its territory shall have for its domicile the place where it keeps an establishment, an agency, or any representative whatsoever. This domicile attributes jurisdiction to the national tribunals in those juridical relations concerning acts which have taken place in the country, whatever their nature may be.

DECLARATION OF THE DELEGATION OF
ECUADOR

The delegation of Ecuador has the honor to subscribe in its entirety the convention of the code of private international law, in homage to Dr. Busta-

Bustamante. No cree necesario puntualizar reserva alguna, dejando a salvo, tan solo, la facultad general contenida en la misma convención, que deja a los gobiernos la libertad de ratificarla.

DECLARACIÓN DE LA DELEGACIÓN DE NICARAGUA

Nicaragua en materias que ahora o en lo futuro considere de algún modo sujetas al derecho canónico no podrá aplicar las disposiciones del código de derecho internacional privado que estuvieron en conflicto con aquel derecho.

Declara que como lo expresó verbalmente en varios casos durante la discusión, algunas de las disposiciones del código aprobado están en desacuerdo con disposiciones expresas de la legislación de Nicaragua o con principios que son bases de esa legislación; pero como un debido homenaje a la obra insigne del ilustre autor de aquel código, prefiere en vez de puntualizar las reservas del caso, hacer esta declaración y dejar que los poderes públicos de Nicaragua formulen tales reservas o reformen hasta donde sea posible la legislación nacional en los casos de incompatibilidad.

DECLARACIÓN DE LA DELEGACIÓN DE CHILE

La delegación de Chile se complace en presentar sus más calurosas felicitaciones al eminente y sabio jurisconsulto americano, señor Antonio Sánchez de Bustamante, por la magna labor que ha realizado redactando un proyecto de código de derecho internacional privado, destinado a regir las relaciones entre los estados de América. Este trabajo es una contribución preciosa para el desarrollo del panamericanismo jurídico, que todos los países del Nuevo Mundo desean ver fortalecido y desarrollado. Aun cuando esta obra grandiosa de la codificación no puede realizarse en breve espacio de tiempo, porque necesita de la madurez y de la reflexión de los estados que en ella van parte. It does not deem it necessary to set forth any reservation, preserving only the general power, provided in the convención itself, which leaves the Governments at liberty to ratify it.

DECLARATION OF THE DELEGATION OF NICARAGUA

The Republic of Nicaragua will be unable to apply the provisions of the code of private international law which may be in conflict with the canon law in matters which now or in the future Nicaragua may consider to be subject to such canon law.

The Nicaraguan delegation declares, as it has previously done several times verbally throughout the discussions, that some of the provisions of the approved code are in disagreement with express provisions of the legislation of Nicaragua or with principles which form the basis of such legislation; but, as deserved homage to the notable work of the illustrious author of this code, it chooses, instead of formulating the corresponding reservations, to make these declarations and to leave to the public authorities of Nicaragua the formulation of such reservations or the modification, as far as possible, of the national legislation, in cases of conflict.

DECLARATION OF THE DELEGATION OF CHILE

The delegation of Chile is pleased to offer its warmest congratulations to the eminent and learned jurist of America, Dr. Antonio Sánchez de Bustamante, for the great work he has done in drafting a project of code of private international law, destined to regulate the relations among the Republics of America. This work is a precious contribution to the furthering of juridical Pan Americanism, which all countries of the New World desire to see strengthened and developed. Although this great task of codification can not be accomplished in a brief span of time, because it needs mature thought on the part of the states which are to participate in it, the delegation of Chile will a participar, la delegación de Chile no será un obstáculo para que esta Conferencia Panamericana apruebe un código de derecho internacional privado; pero salvará su voto en las materias y en los puntos que estime conveniente, en especial, en los puntos referentes a su política tradicional o a su legislación nacional.

DECLARACIÓN DE LA DELEGACIÓN DE PANAMÁ

Al emitir su voto en favor del proyecto de código de derecho internacional privado en la sesión celebrada por esta comisión el día 27 de enero último, la delegación de la República de Panamá manifestó que oportunamente presentaría las reservas que creyere necesarias, si a ello hubiere lugar. Esta actitud de la delegación de Panamá obedeció a ciertas dudas que abrigaba respecto del alcance y extensión de algunas de las disposiciones contenidas en el proyecto, especialmente en lo relativo a la aplicación de la ley nacional del extranjero residente en el país, lo cual habría dado lugar a un verdadero conflicto, ya que en la República de Panamá impera el sistema de la ley territorial desde el momento mismo en que se constituyó como estado independiente. Sin embargo, la delegación panameña estima que todas las dificultades que pudieran presentarse en esta delicada materia han sido previstas y quedarán sabiamente resueltas por medio del artículo séptimo del proyecto, según el cual "cada estado contratante aplicará como leyes personales las del domicilio o las de la nacionalidad, según el sistema que haya adoptado o adopte en lo adelante la legislación interior." Como todos los demás estados que suscriban y ratifiquen la convención respectiva, Panamá quedará, pues, en plena libertad de aplicar su propia ley, que es la territorial.

Entendidas así las cosas, a la delegación de Panamá le es altamente grato declarar, como lo hace en efecto, que le imparte su aprobación al proyecto de código de derecho internacional privado, not be an obstacle to the approval of a code of private international law by this Pan American Conference; but it will reserve its vote on such matters and questions as it may deem advisable, especially those points relating to the traditional policy or legislation of Chile.

DECLARATION OF THE DELEGATION OF PANAMÁ

When casting its vote in favor of the project of code of private international law at the meeting of the committee held on January 27 ultimo, the delegation of the Republic of Panamá stated that at an opportune time it would present such reservations as it might deem necessary, should the need arise. This attitude of the delegation of Panamá was due to certain doubts it entertained with reference to the meaning and scope of some of the provisions contained in the project, particularly as regards the application of the national law to foreigners residing in the country, as this would have given rise to a real conflict, because in the Republic of Panamá ever since its establishment as an independent nation, the system of the territorial law has been in force. However, the delegation of Panamá considers that all the difficulties which could possibly arise in this delicate matter have been foreseen and wisely obviated by Article 7 of the project, in accordance with which "each contracting state shall apply as personal law that of the domicile or that of the nationality, or that which its domestic legislation may have prescribed or may hereafter prescribe." As in the case of all other states subscribing and ratifying the convention, Panamá, therefore, will be at full liberty to apply its own law, which is the territorial law.

With matters so understood, it is highly gratifying for the delegation of Panamá to declare, as it does, that it extends its approval without reservations of any kind to the project of code o al Código Bustamante que es como debería llamarse en homenaje a su autor, sin reservas de ninguna clase.

DECLARACIÓN DE LA DELEGACIÓN DE
GUATEMALA

Guatemala ha adoptado en su legislación civil, el sistema del domicilio, pero aunque así no fuera, los artículos conciliatorios del código hacen armonizar perfectamente cualquier conflicto que pudiera suscitarse entre los diferentes estados, según las escuelas diversas a que hayan sido afiliados.

En consecuencia, pues, la delegación de Guatemala se acomoda perfectamente a la modalidad que con tanta ilustración, prudencia, genialidad y criterio científico, campean en el proyecto de código de derecho internacional privado y quiere dejar constancia expresa de su aceptación absoluta y sin reservas de ninguna especie.

of private international law, or Bustamante Code, as it should be called in honor of its author.

DECLARATION OF THE DELEGATION OF
GUATEMALA

Guatemala has incorporated into its civil legislation the doctrine of domicile, but even if such were not the case, the conciliatory articles of the code harmonize perfectly any conflict which might arise between different states due to their affiliation with diverse schools.

In consequence, therefore, the delegation of Guatemala is in perfect accord with the method which, with so much wisdom, caution, ingenuity, and scientific judgment, is set forth in the project of code of private international law, and it desires to leave express record of its absolute acceptance of the latter without reservations of any kind.

This document shall certify to the states in which the aircraft is to operate, that, according to the opinion of the authority that issues it, such aircraft complies with the airworthiness requirements of each of the states named in said certificate.

The aircraft commander shall at all times hold the certificate in his custody and shall deliver it for inspection and verification to the authorized representatives of the state which said aircraft visits.

Each contracting state shall communicate to the other states parties to this convention and to the Pan American Union its regulations governing the rating of its aircraft as to airworthiness and shall similarly communicate any changes made therein.

While the states affirm the principle that the aircraft of each contracting state shall have the liberty of engaging in air commerce with the other contracting states without being subjected to the licensing system of any state with which such commerce is carried on, each and every contracting state mentioned in the certificate of airworthiness reserves the right to refuse to recognize as valid the certificate of airworthiness of any foreign aircraft where inspection by a duly authorized commission of such state shows that the aircraft is not, at the time of inspection, reasonably airworthy in accordance with the normal requirements

En tal caso, dicho estado puede rehusarle el permiso para proseguir el viaje a través de su espacio aéreo hasta que, teniendo en consideración la seguridad pública, las condiciones de navegabilidad se declaren satisfactorias, y notificará inmediatamente su decisión al estado cuya nacionalidad posee la aeronave y a la Unión Panamericana.

ARTÍCULO 13

El comandante de la aeronave, los pilotos, mecánicos y demás miembros de la tripulación de toda aeronave que practique la navegación internacional entre los varios estados contratantes deberán, de acuerdo con las leyes de cada estado que rijan esta materia, estar provistos de un certificado de competencia expedido por el estado contratante cuya nacionalidad posee la aeronave.

En el certificado o certificados se hará constar que cada piloto, además de haber cumplido con los requisitos exigidos por el estado que lo expide, ha rendido un examen satisfactorio sobre las reglas de tráfico existentes en los otros estados contratantes sobre los que desee circular. Los requisitos de forma de tales documentos serán uniformes en todos los estados contratantes y estarán redactados en los idiomas de todos ellos y a ese fin, la Unión Panamericana queda encargada de efectuar los arreglos necesarios entre los estados contratantes.

Tal certificado o certificados permanecerán en posesión del comandante de la aeronave mientras los pilotos, mecánicos y demás miembros de la tripulación continúen empleados en la aeronave. Al serles devueltos los certificados se dejará copia certificada de ellos en los archivos de la aeronave.

Los certificados podrán ser en cualquier tiempo inspeccionados por los representantes debidamente autorizados de los estados que visite la aeronave.

The requirements of form of said documents shall be uniform throughout all the contracting states and shall be drafted in the language of all of them, and for this purpose the Pan American Union is charged with making the necessary arrangements amongst the contracting states.

Such certificate or certificates shall be held in the possession of the aircraft commander as long as the pilots, engineers and other members of the operating crew concerned continue to be employed on the aircraft. Upon the return of such certificate an authenticated copy thereof shall be retained in the files of the aircraft.

Such certificate or certificates shall be open at all times to the inspection of the duly authorized representatives of any state visited.

Cada uno de los estados contratantes comunicará a los otros estados partes de esta convención y a la Unión Panamericana los reglamentos que fijan la expedición de tales certificados y cualesquiera cambios que se introduzcan en dichos reglamentos.

ARTICLE 16

The present convention shall replace between the contracting states the Buenos Aires convention of August 11, agosto de 1910. Esta quedará en vigor en las relaciones de los estados que no ratificaren la presente convención.

Los estados signatarios de la presente convención podrán, al cambiarse las ratificaciones, declarar qué entienden sobre tal o cual punto, permanecer ligados por las disposiciones de las convenciones anteriores que hubieran suscrito.

ARTÍCULO 17

La presente convención comenzará a regir entre los estados signatarios que la ratifiquen, tres meses después de que comuniquen su ratificación al Gobierno de Cuba, y permanecerá en vigor entre todos ellos hasta un año después de la fecha de la denuncia. Esta denuncia será dirigida al Gobierno cubano y no tendrá efecto sino respecto del país que la haya hecho.

RESERVA DE LA DELEGACIÓN DE CHILE

La delegación de Chile acepta en general la modificación de la convención de Buenos Aires que se acaba de aprobar, pero debe hacer reserva respecto de los puntos en que esta convención modificada se halla en oposición con la legislación vigente en Chile.

Esta reserva no disminuye nuestro anhelo de alcanzar la adopción de principios jurídicos que amparen por igual en todos los países de América la propiedad intelectual.

RESERVA DE LA DELEGACIÓN DE VENEZUELA

La delegación de Venezuela reserva la firma de esta convención hasta el momento que su Gobierno resuelva de un modo concreto acerca de ella, porque tanto la convención de Buenos Aires, que Venezuela no solo no ha ratificado sino que su Congreso expresamente negó, como ésta, contienen disposiciones contrarias a nuestra tradición jurídica y a nuestras leyes positivas sobre la materia.

1910. The latter shall remain in effect as to the relations of the states that do not ratify the present convention.

The signatory states of the present convention shall be at liberty, upon exchanging ratifications, to declare that upon this or that point they understand that they shall be bound by the provisions of any previous convention which they may have signed.

ARTICLE 17

The present convention shall take effect, between the signatory states which ratify the same, three months after they communicate their ratification to the Government of Cuba, and shall remain in effect between all of them until one year after the date of denouncement. This denouncement shall be sent to the Government of Cuba and shall have no effect, except with regard to the country that has made such denouncement.

RESERVATION OF THE DELEGATION OF CHILE

The delegation of Chile accepts in general the modification of the convention of Buenos Aires which has just been approved, but must formulate a reservation in regard to the points in which this modified convention is opposed to the legislation in force in Chile.

This reservation does not diminish our earnest desire of attaining the adoption of juridical principles which give equal protection to intellectual property in all countries of America.

RESERVATION OF THE DELEGATION OF VENEZUELA

The delegation of Venezuela reserves the signing of this convention until such time as its Government shall reach a definite decision with regard to it, since the convention of Buenos Aires, which Venezuela not only did not ratify but which its Congress expressly rejected, as well as the present convention, contains provisions which are contrary to our juridical tradition and to our positive laws on the matter.

CONVENCIÓN

[TRATADOS]

Deseando los Gobiernos de los Estados de América fijar con claridad las reglas que deben regir los tratados que suscriban entre ellos, han acordado establecerlas en una convención, y al efecto han nombrado como plenipotenciarios a los señores siguientes:

[Los nombres de los plenipotenciarios siguen.]

Quienes, habiéndose cambiado sus respectivos plenos poderes y habiéndolos hallado en buena y debida forma, han convenido lo siguiente:

ARTÍCULO 1

Los tratados serán celebrados por los poderes competentes de los estados o por sus representantes, según su derecho interno respectivo.

ARTÍCULO 2

Es condición esencial en los tratados la forma escrita. La confirmación, prórroga, renovación o reconducción, serán igualmente hechas por escrito, salvo si otra cosa se hubiera estipulado.

ARTÍCULO 3

La interpretación auténtica de los tratados, cuando las partes contratantes las juzguen necesarias, será también formulada por escrito.

ARTÍCULO 4

Los tratados serán publicados inmediatamente después del canje de las ratificaciones.

La omisión en el cumplimiento de esta obligación internacional no afectará la vigencia de los tratados, ni la exigibilidad de las obligaciones contenidas en ellos.

ARTÍCULO 5

Los tratados no son obligatorios sino después de ratificados por los estados contratantes, aunque esta cláusula no conste en los plenos poderes de los negociadores ni figure en el mismo tratado.

[TREATIES]

The governments of the American States being desirous of clearly fixing the rules which must govern the treaties they may sign among themselves, have decided to establish them in a convention, and to that end have appointed the following plenipotentiaries:

[Here follow the names of the plenipotentiaries.]

Who, having exchanged their respective full powers and found them to be in good and due form, have agreed on the following:

ARTICLE 1

Treaties will be concluded by the competent authorities of the states or by their representatives, according to their respective internal law.

ARTICLE 2

The written form is an essential condition of treaties.

The confirmation, prorogation, renewal or continuance, shall also be made in writing unless other stipulations have been made.

ARTICLE 3

The authentic interpretation of treaties, when considered necessary by the contracting parties, shall likewise be in writing.

ARTICLE 4

Treaties shall be published immediately after exchange of ratifications. The failure to discharge this international duty shall affect neither the force of treaties nor the fulfilment of obligations stipulated therein.

ARTICLE 5

Treaties are obligatory only after ratification by the contracting states, even though this condition is not stipulated in the full powers of the negotiators or does not appear in the treaty itself.

ARTÍCULO 6

La ratificación debe ser otorgada sin condiciones y comprender todo el tratado. Será hecha por escrito, de conformidad con la legislación del estado.

Si el estado que ratifica hace reservas al tratado, éste entrará en vigor desde que informada de estas reservas, la otra parte contratante las aceptare expresamente o no habiéndolas rechazado formalmente ejecutare actos que impliquen su aceptación.

En los tratados internacionales celebrados entre diversos estados, la reserva hecha por uno de ellos en el acto de la ratificación, solo afecta a la aplicación de la cláusula respectiva, en las relaciones de los demás estados contratantes con el estado que hace la reserva.

ARTÍCULO 7

La falta de ratificación o la reserva, son actos inherentes a la soberanía nacional, y como tales, constituyen el ejercicio de un derecho que no viola ninguna disposición o buena forma internacional. En caso de negativa, ésta será comunicada a los otros contratantes.

ARTÍCULO 8

Los tratados regirán desde el canje o depósito de las ratificaciones, excepto si se hubiere convenido otra fecha por cláusula expresa.

ARTÍCULO 9

La aceptación, o no aceptación, de las cláusulas de un tratado a favor de un tercer estado que no fué parte contratante, depende exclusivamente de la decisión de éste.

ARTÍCULO 10

Ningún estado puede eximirse de las obligaciones del tratado o modificar sus estipulaciones sino con el acuerdo, pacíficamente obtenido, de los otros contratantes.

ARTICLE 6

Ratification must be unconditional and must embrace the entire treaty. It must be made in writing pursuant to the legislation of the state.

In case the ratifying state makes reservations to the treaty it shall become effective when the other contracting party informed of the reservations expressly accepts them, or having failed to reject them formally, should perform actions implying its acceptance.

In international treaties celebrated between different states, a reservation made by one of them in the act of ratification affects only the application of the clause in question in the relation of the other contracting states with the state making the reservation.

ARTICLE 7

Refusal to ratify or the formulation of a reservation are acts inherent in national sovereignty and as such constitute the exercise of a right which violates no international stipulation or good form. In case of refusal it shall be communicated to the other contracting parties.

ARTICLE 8

Treaties shall become effective from the date of exchange or deposit of ratification, unless some other date has been agreed upon through an express provision.

ARTICLE 9

The acceptance or the non-acceptance of provisions in a treaty, for the benefit of a third state which was not a contracting party, depends exclusively upon the latter's decision.

ARTICLE 10

No state can relieve itself of the obligations of a treaty or modify its stipulations except by the agreement, secured through peaceful means, of the other contracting parties.

ARTÍCULO 11

Los tratados continuarán surtiendo sus efectos aun cuando llegue a modificarse la constitución interna de los estados contratantes. Si la organización del estado cambiara de manera que la ejecución fuera imposible, por división de territorio o por otros motivos análogos, los tratados serán adaptados a las nuevas condiciones.

ARTÍCULO 12

Cuando el tratado se hace inejecutable, por culpa de la parte que se obligó, o por circunstancias que en el momento de la celebración dependían de esta parte y eran ignoradas por la otra parte, aquella responde a los perjuicios resultantes de su inejecución.

ARTÍCULO 13

La ejecución del tratado, puede, por cláusula expresa o en virtud de convenio especial, ser puesta, en todo o en parte, bajo la garantía de uno o más estados.

El estado garante no podrá intervenir en la ejecución del tratado, sino en virtud de requerimiento de una de las partes interesadas y cuando se realicen las condiciones bajo las cuales fué estipulada la intervención, y al hacerlo, sólo le será lícito emplear medios autorizados por el derecho internacional y sin otras exigencias de mayor alcance que las del mismo estado garantido.

ARTÍCULO 14

Los tratados cesan de regir:

- a) Cumplida la obligación estipulada;
- b) Transcurrido el plazo por el cual fué celebrado;
- c) Cumplida la condición resolutoria;
- d) Por acuerdo entre las partes;
- e) Con la renuncia de la parte a quien aprovecha el tratado de un modo exclusivo;
- f) Por la denuncia, total o parcial, cuando proceda;
- g) Cuando se torna inejecutable.

ARTICLE 11

Treaties shall continue in effect even though the internal constitution of the contracting states has been modified. If the organization of the state should be changed in such a manner as to render impossible the execution of treaties, because of division of territory or other like reasons, treaties shall be adapted to the new conditions.

ARTICLE 12

Whenever a treaty becomes impossible of execution through the fault of the party entering into the obligation, or through circumstances which at the moment of concluding it were under control of this party and unknown to the other party, the former shall be responsible for damages resulting from its non-execution.

ARTICLE 13

The execution of a treaty may, through express stipulation or by virtue of special agreement, be placed wholly or partly under the guaranty of one or more states.

The guarantor state can intervene in the execution of the treaty only by virtue of a request by one of the interested parties and then only under the conditions which were stipulated for intervention. When intervention takes place, only such measures may be employed by the guarantor state as are sanctioned by international law, and without other requirements of greater scope than those of the state which has been guaranteed.

ARTICLE 14

Treaties cease to be effective:

- a) When the stipulated obligation has been fulfilled;
- b) When the length of time for which it was made has expired;
- c) When the resolatory condition has been fulfilled;
- d) By agreement between the parties;
- e) By renunciation of the party exclusively entitled to a benefit thereunder;
- f) By total or partial denunciation, if agreed upon;
- g) When it becomes incapable of execution.

ARTÍCULO 15

Podrá igualmente declararse la caducidad de un tratado cuando éste sea permanente y de aplicación no continua, siempre que las causas que le dieron origen hayan desaparecido y pudiera lógicamente deducirse que no se presentarán en lo futuro.

La parte contratante que alegare ésta caducidad, al no obtener el asentimiento de la otra o de las otras, podrá acudir al arbitraje, sin cuyo fallo favorable, y mientras éste no se dicte, continuarán en vigor las obligaciones contraídas.

ARTÍCULO 16

Las obligaciones contraídas en los tratados serán sancionadas en los casos de incumplimiento, y después de agotar sin éxito las negociaciones diplomáticas, por decisión de una corte de justicia o un tribunal arbitral, dentro de los límites y con los trámites que estuvieren vigentes al tiempo en que la infracción se alegare.

ARTÍCULO 17

Los tratados, cuya denuncia haya sido convenida y los que establecen reglas de derecho internacional, no pueden ser denunciados, sino de acuerdo con lo establecido por ellos.

A falta de estipulación, el tratado puede ser denunciado por cualquier estado contratante, quien notificará a los otros de esta decisión siempre que haya cumplido todas las obligaciones convenidas en el mismo.

En éste caso el tratado quedará sin efecto en relación al denunciante un año después de la última notificación, y continuará subsistente para los demás signatarios, si los hubiere.

ARTÍCULO 18

Dos o más estados pueden convenir en que sus relaciones se rijan por otras reglas que no sean las establecidas en convenciones generales celebradas por ellos mismos con otros estados.

Este precepto es aplicable no solamente a los tratados futuros, sino a los que estén en vigor al tiempo de esta convención.

ARTICLE 15

The caducity of a treaty may also be declared when it is permanent and of non-continuous application, on condition that the causes which originated it have disappeared and when it may logically be deduced that they will not reappear in the future.

The contracting party invoking this caducity may, upon not obtaining the consent of the other party or parties, appeal to arbitration, the contracted obligation to remain in force if a favorable award is not obtained and while the decision is being made.

ARTICLE 16

Obligations contracted in treaties shall be sanctioned in cases of non-compliance and when all diplomatic negotiations have been exhausted without success, by decision of a court of justice or an arbitral tribunal within the limits and according to the procedure in use at the time in which the infraction is alleged.

ARTICLE 17

Treaties whose denunciation may have been agreed upon and those establishing rules of international law, can be denounced only in the manner provided thereby.

In the absence of such a stipulation, a treaty may be denounced by any contracting state, which state shall notify the others of this decision, provided it has complied with all obligations covenanted therein.

In this event the treaty shall become ineffective, as far as the denouncing state is concerned, one year after the last notification, and will continue in force for any other signatory states, if any.

ARTICLE 18

Two or more states may agree that their relations are to be governed by rules other than those established in general conventions celebrated by them with other states.

This precept applies not only to future treaties but also to those in effect at the time of concluding this convention.

ARTÍCULO 19

Un estado que no haya tomado parte en la concertación del tratado, podrá adherirse al mismo si no se opusiera alguna de las partes contratantes, a todas las cuales debe ser comunicado. La adhesión será considerada, a menos que sea hecha con reserva expresa de ratificación.

ARTÍCULO 20

La presente convención no afecta los compromisos adquiridos anteriormente por las partes contratantes en virtud de acuerdos internacionales.

ARTÍCULO 21

La presente convención, después de firmada, será sometida a las ratificaciones de los estados signatarios. El Gobierno de Cuba queda encargado de enviar copias certificadas auténticas a los gobiernos para el referido fin de la ratificación. El instrumento de ratificación será depositado en los archivos de la Unión Panamericana en Wáshington, quien notificará ese depósito a los gobiernos signatarios; tal notificación valdrá como canje de ratificaciones. Esta convención quedará abierta a la adhesión de los estados no signatarios.

En fe de lo cual los plenipotenciarios expresados firman la presente convención en español, inglés, francés y portugués en la ciudad de la Habana, el día 20 de febrero de 1928.

RESERVA DE LA DELEGACIÓN DE MÉXICO

La delegación mexicana, sin tener en cuenta los votos que quiere emitir en contra de varios artículos, firmará las diversas convenciones de derecho internacional público aprobadas, haciendo como única reserva la relativa al artículo 13, que no acepta, de la convención sobre tratados.

RESERVA DE LA DELEGACIÓN DE EL SALVADOR

La delegación de El Salvador no sólo opone su voto negativo al artículo 13, sino que vota negativamente la convención, y no la suscribe.

ARTICLE 19

A state not participating in the making of a treaty may adhere to the same if none other of the contracting parties be opposed, its adherence to be communicated to all. The adherence shall be deemed final unless made with express reservation of ratification.

ARTICLE 20

The present convention does not affect obligations previously undertaken by contracting parties through international agreements.

ARTICLE 21

After being signed, the present convention shall be submitted to the ratification of the signatory states. The Government of Cuba is charged with transmitting authentic certified copies to the governments for the aforementioned purpose of ratification. The instrument of ratification shall be deposited in the archives of the Pan American Union in Washington, the Union to notify the signatory governments of said deposit. Such notification shall be considered as an exchange of ratifications. This convention shall remain open to the adherence of non-signatory states.

In witness whereof the aforementioned plenipotentiaries sign the present convention in Spanish, English, French, and Portuguese, in the city of Habana, the 20th day of February, 1928.

RESERVATION OF THE DELEGATION OF MEXICO

The delegation of Mexico, regardless of the contrary vote it wishes to formulate with respect to several articles in the conventions on public international law already adopted, will sign them making as sole reservation one relative to Article 13, which it does not accept, of the convention on treaties.

RESERVATION OF THE DELEGATION OF SALVADOR

The delegation of Salvador not only casts its negative vote to Article 13, but it also votes against the convention and does not sign it.

RESERVAS DE LA DELEGACIÓN DE
BOLIVIA

En el concepto de la delegación de Bolivia, la inejecutabilidad a que se refiere el inciso "g" del artículo 14, se produce, entre otros, en los siguientes casos:

1. Cuando los hechos y circunstancias que le dieron origen o le sirvieron de base, se han modificado fundamentalmente;
2. Cuando su ejecución se torna contraria a la naturaleza de las cosas;
3. Cuando se torna incompatible con la existencia de un estado, con su independencia o dignidad;
4. Cuando se torna ruinoso para su riqueza o su comercio.

La reserva de Bolivia sobre el artículo 15 se refiere a que son susceptibles de caducidad no sólo los tratados de aplicación discontinua, como lo establece dicho artículo, sino todo género de tratados, cualquiera que sea su carácter o denominación, aún los llamados definitivos, que como toda convención humana, son susceptibles de error, ya que nada hay inmutable y eterno.

RESERVATIONS OF THE DELEGATION OF
BOLIVIA

In the opinion of the delegation of Bolivia the condition of becoming incapable of execution to which Section (g) of Article 14 refers, also arises, among others, in the following cases:

1. When the facts and circumstances which gave origin or served as a basis to the treaty have been fundamentally modified;
2. When its execution becomes contrary to the nature of things;
3. When it becomes incompatible with the existence, independence or dignity of a state;
4. When it becomes ruinous to its wealth or its commerce.

The reservation which Bolivia makes to Article 15 is to the effect that not only treaties of non-continuous application, as provided in said article, are subject to a declaration of caducity, but that the same should apply to all kinds of treaties, whatever their nature or denomination, even to those so-called definitive treaties which like every human covenant are liable to error, since there is nothing immutable and eternal.

[FUNCIONARIOS DIPLOMÁTICOS]

Los Gobiernos de las Repúblicas representadas en la Sexta Conferencia Internacional Americana celebrada en la ciudad de la Habana, República de Cuba, el año de 1928, teniendo en cuenta que una de las materias de mayor importancia en las relaciones internacionales es la que se refiere a los derechos y deberes de los funcionarios diplomáticos y que debe regularse de acuerdo con las condiciones de la vida económica, política e internacional de las naciones;

Comprendiendo que si bien es de desear que esa regulación se efectúe de acuerdo con las nuevas tendencias;

Especificando que los funcionarios diplomáticos no representan en ningún caso la persona del jefe del estado, y sí su gobierno, debiendo estar acreditados ante un gobierno reconocido; y

Reconociendo que como los funcionarios diplomáticos representan sus respectivos estados, no deben reclamar inmunidades que no sean esenciales al desempeño de sus deberes oficiales y que sería de desear que bien el propio funcionario o el estado representado por él renuncien la inmunidad diplomática cuando se refiera a acciones civiles que no tengan nada que ver con el desempeño de su misión;

No es posible, sin embargo, concertar desde ahora estipulaciones generales que si bien constituyen una tendencia definida en las relaciones internacionales tropiezan en algunos casos con la arraigada práctica de varios estados en sentido contrario;

Por lo cual y mientras pueda formularse una regulación más completa de los derechos y deberes de los funcionarios diplomáticos;

Han resuelto celebrar una convención que comprenda los principios generalmente admitidos por todas las

[DIPLOMATIC OFFICERS]

The Governments of the Republics represented at the Sixth International Conference of American States, held in the city of Habana, Republic of Cuba, the year 1928, being aware that one of the most important matters in the field of international relations is that pertaining to the rights and duties of diplomatic officers, which should be regulated in accordance with the conditions of economic, political, and international life of nations;

Realizing the desirability that such regulation be effected pursuant to the new trends on the matter;

Recognizing that diplomatic officers do not in any case represent the person of the chief of state but only their government and that they must be accredited to a recognized government; and

Acknowledging the fact that diplomatic officers represent their respective states and should not claim immunities which are not essential to the discharge of their official duties, and acknowledging also that it would seem desirable that either the officer himself or the state represented by him renounce diplomatic immunity whenever touching upon a civil action entirely alien to the fulfilment of his mission;

There being no possibility, nevertheless, at the present moment, of agreeing to general stipulations which although forming a well-defined trend in international relations sometimes conflict with the established practices of various states in a contrary sense;

Therefore and until a more complete regulation of the rights and duties of diplomatic officers can be formulated;

Have decided to conclude a convention incorporating the principles generally accepted by all nations, and have naciones y han nombrado como sus plenipotenciarios a los señores siguientes:

[Los nombres de los plenipotenciarios siguen.]

Quienes, después de haber depositado sus plenos poderes, hallados en buena y debida forma, han acordado las siguientes disposiciones:

ARTÍCULO 1.—Disposición general

Los estados tienen el derecho de hacerse representar unos ante otros por medio de funcionarios diplomáticos.

SECCIÓN I.—De los jefes de misión

ARTÍCULO 2

Los funcionarios diplomáticos se dividen en ordinarios y extraordinarios.

Son ordinarios los que representan de manera permanente al gobierno de un estado ante el de otro.

Son extraordinarios los encargados de misión especial, o los que se acreditan para representar al gobierno en conferencias, congresos u otros organismos internacionales.

ARTÍCULO 3

Los funcionarios diplomáticos tienen los mismos derechos, prerrogativas e inmunidades, cualquiera que sea su categoría, salvo en lo tocante a precedencia y etiqueta.

La etiqueta depende de los usos diplomáticos en general, así como de las leyes y reglamentos del país ante el cual está acreditado el diplomático.

ARTÍCULO 4

Además de las funciones señaladas en sus credenciales, los funcionarios ordinarios tienen atribuciones que pueden conferirles las leyes o decretos de los respectivos países. Deberán ejercer sus atribuciones sin entrar en conflicto con las leyes del país donde estuvieren acreditados.

ARTÍCULO 5

Todo estado puede hacerse representar por un solo funcionario ante uno o más gobiernos.

ARTICLE 1.—General provision

States have the right of being represented before each other through diplomatic officers.

SECTION I.—Chiefs of mission

ARTICLE 2

Diplomatic officers are classed as ordinary and extraordinary.

Those who permanently represent the government of one state before that of another are ordinary.

Those entrusted with a special mission or those who are accredited to represent the government in international conferences and congresses or other international bodies are extraordinary.

ARTICLE 3

Except as concerns precedence and etiquette, diplomatic officers, whatever their category, have the same rights, prerogatives and immunities.

Etiquette depends upon diplomatic usages in general as well as upon the laws and regulations of the country to which the officers are accredited.

ARTICLE 4

In addition to the functions indicated in their credentials, ordinary officers possess the attributes which the laws and decrees of the respective countries may confer upon them. They should exercise their attributes without coming into conflict with the laws of the country to which they are accredited.

ARTICLE 5

Every state may entrust its representation before one or more governments to a single diplomatic officer.

Varios estados pueden hacerse representar ante otro por un solo funcionario diplomático.

ARTÍCULO 6

Los funcionarios diplomáticos autorizados al efecto por sus gobiernos, pueden, con el consentimiento del gobierno local, y a solicitud de un estado no representado ante éste por funcionario ordinario, asumir ante el mismo gobierno la defensa temporal o accidental de los intereses de dicho estado.

ARTÍCULO 7

Los estados son libres en la elección de sus funcionarios diplomáticos; pero no podrán investir con estas funciones a nacionales del estado en que la misión debe actuar, sin el consentimiento de éste.

ARTÍCULO 8

Ningún estado podrá acreditar sus funcionarios diplomáticos ante los demás estados, sin previo arreglo con éstos.

Los estados pueden negarse a admitir un funcionario diplomático de los otros, o, habiéndolo admitido ya, pedir su retiro, sin estar obligados a expresar los motivos de su resolución.

ARTÍCULO 9

Los funcionarios diplomáticos extraordinarios gozan de las mismas prerrogativas e inmunidades que los ordinarios.

SECCIÓN II.—Del personal de las misiones

ARTÍCULO 10

Cada misión tendrá el personal determinado por su gobierno.

ARTÍCULO 11

CONVENCIÓN

[NEUTRALIDAD MARÍTIMA]

Los Gobiernos de las Repúblicas representadas en la Sexta Conferencia Internacional Americana celebrada en la ciudad de la Habana, República de Cuba, el año 1928;

Deseando que cuando se produzca una guerra entre dos o más estados los demás puedan en aras de la paz ofrecer un buen oficio o su mediación para poner fin al conflicto, sin que esa acción pueda considerarse como acto poco amistoso:

Convencido de que en caso de que no pueda lograrse este objetivo los estados neutrales tienen el mismo interés en que sus derechos sean respetados por los beligerantes;

Estimando que la neutralidad es la situación jurídica de los estados que no toman parte en las hostilidades y que ella crea derechos e impone obligaciones de imparcialidad que deben ser reglamentadas;

Reconociendo que la solidaridad internacional exige que la libertad del comercio se respete siempre, evitando en lo posible cargas inútiles a los neutrales;

Siendo conveniente que mientras no se alcance ampliamente este objetivo se reduzcan al minimum esas cargas; y

Esperando a que sea posible regular la materia de modo que todos los intereses afectados tengan todas las garantías apetecidas;

Han resuelto celebrar una convención a ese efecto, y han nombrado como sus plenipotenciarios a los señores siguientes:

[Los nombres de los plenipotenciarios siguen.]

Quienes, después de haber depositado sus plenos poderes, hallados en buena y debida forma, han acordado las siguientes disposiciones:

[MARITIME NEUTRALITY]

The Governments of the Republics represented at the Sixth International Conference of American States, held in the city of Habana, Republic of Cuba, in the year 1928;

Desiring that, in case war breaks out between two or more states the other states may, in the service of peace, offer their good offices or mediation to bring the conflict to an end, without such an action being considered as an unfriendly act;

Convinced that in case this aim cannot be attained, neutral states have equal interest in having their rights respected by the belligerents;

Considering that neutrality is the juridical situation of states which do not take part in the hostilities, and that it creates rights and imposes obligations of impartiality, which should be regulated;

Recognizing that international solidarity requires that the liberty of commerce should be always respected, avoiding as far as possible unnecessary burdens for the neutrals;

It being convenient, that as long as this object is not reached, to reduce those burdens as much as possible; and

In the hope that it will be possible to regulate the matter so that all interests concerned may have every desired guaranty;

Have resolved to formulate a convention to that effect and have appointed the following plenipotentiaries:

[Here follow the names of the plenipotentiaries.]

Who, after having presented their credentials, which were found in good and correct form, have agreed upon the following provisions:

SECCIÓN I.—De la libertad de comercio en tiempo de guerra

ARTÍCULO 1

El comercio en tiempo de guerra se regirá por las siguientes reglas:

1. Las naves de guerra de los beligerantes tienen el derecho de detener y visitar, en alta mar o en aguas territoriales que no sean neutrales, cualquier buque mercante con objeto de conocer en el carácter y la nacionalidad, verificar si conduce un transporte prohibido por la ley internacional, o comprobar si ha realizado alguna violación del bloqueo. Si el buque mercante no atiende la intimación de detenerse, puede el de guerra perseguirlo y detenerlo por la fuerza. Fuera de esta hipótesis, el buque no podrá ser atacado sino cuando después de intimado, dejare de observar las instrucciones que le hubiesen sido dadas.

El buque no será puesto fuera de condiciones de navegación antes de que la tripulación y los pasajeros hayan sido trasladados a lugar seguro.

2. Los submarinos beligerantes están sujetos a las reglas anteriores. Si el submarino no pudiera capturar al buque de conformidad con esta regla, no tendrá derecho a perseguir el ataque ni a destruir el buque.

ARTÍCULO 2

La detención del buque, así como la de su tripulación, por violación de la neutralidad, se hará de acuerdo con el régimen que mejor convenga al estado que la efectúe y a costa del buque infractor. Dicho estado, salvo el caso de falta grave de su parte, no es responsable por los daños que sufre el buque.

SECCIÓN II.—Deberes y derechos de los beligerantes

ARTÍCULO 3

Los estados beligerantes están obligados a abstenerse de ejecutar en aguas neutrales, actos de guerra o de cualquier otra naturaleza que pueda constituir de parte del estado que los tolere una infracción de la neutralidad.

SECTION I.—Freedom of commerce in time of war

ARTICLE 1

The following rules shall govern commerce in time of war:

1. Warships of the belligerents have the right to stop and visit on the high seas and in territorial waters that are not neutral any merchant ship with the object of ascertaining its character and nationality and of verifying whether it conveys cargo prohibited by international law or has committed any violation of blockade. RESOLUCIÓN

[EMIGRACIÓN E INMIGRACIÓN]

La Sexta Conferencia Internacional Americana, en atención a que está próxima a reunirse en esta ciudad la Segunda Conferencia Internacional de Emigración e Inmigración, y con el deseo de no poner dificultades o límites a la obra de la mencionada conferencia; pero siendo necesario e indispensable, al mismo tiempo, hacer ciertas declaraciones de principios y algunas recomendaciones,

RESUELVE:

Abstenerse de estudiar en su amplitud, el problema de la inmigración; pero establece los siguientes principios y declaraciones acerca del mismo problema, como puntos de vista de las naciones americanas:

1. Que las convenciones sobre emigración e inmigración, que se celebren entre las naciones del continente americano y naciones de otros continentes, no puedan jamás imponer a un estado americano, medidas tendientes a sustraer al emigrante a la legislación y jurisdicción del país en el cual se incorpora.

2. Que toda resolución concerniente a la emigración e inmigración, se inspire en este doble principio:

- a) La igualdad de derechos civiles entre nacionales y extranjeros;
- b) La cualidad de hombre libre que debe ser reconocida a todo inmigrante, respetados y protegidos los derechos y la dignidad de la persona humana, sin que, por otra parte, ese respeto y esa protección puedan justificar cualquiera ofensa a la soberanía del país.

3. Que los estados americanos se reserven el derecho de examinar las ventajas de la entrada de la corriente

APPENDIX 39

RESOLUTION

[EMIGRATION AND IMMIGRATION]

The Sixth International Conference of American States, in view of the fact that there is soon to be held in this city the Second International Conference on Emigration and Immigration, although not wishing to place difficulties in the way of or limits upon the labors of that conference; but nevertheless believing it necessary and indispensable to formulate certain declarations of principles and some recommendations,

RESOLVES:

To abstain from studying in its entirety the problem of immigration, but to establish the following principles and to make the following declarations with respect to that problem as indicative of the viewpoints of the American nations:

1. That conventions on emigration and immigration which may be concluded between the nations of the American continent and nations of other continents may never impose upon an American state measures tending to withdraw the emigrant from the legislation and jurisdiction of the country into which he becomes incorporated.

2. That all resolutions respecting emigration and immigration be inspired by this double principle:

- a) Equality of civil rights as between nationals and foreigners;
- b) The quality of freeman which should be recognized in every immigrant, the rights and dignity of human beings being respected and protected, without, however, this respect and this protection justifying any offense against the sovereignty of the country.

3. That the American states reserve the right to examine the advantages of the entry of the immigration current inmigratoria en sus territorios, proveniente de otros continentes, ajustando su modo de proceder a sus intereses económicos, políticos y sociales.

4. Que sin prejuzgar, debe recomendarse, para su especial estudio, a la Segunda Conferencia Internacional de Emigración e Inmigración, la siguiente proposición formulada por la delegación de México:

Primero: Para los efectos de la protección de las leyes relativas, únicamente deben considerarse como emigrantes, a los individuos que, sin llevar capital propio, salen de su país para trabajar en otro, en las industrias, el comercio o en la agricultura, o en labores intelectuales, bajo la dependencia de un particular o empresa; y como inmigrantes a los que, en iguales condiciones y con el mismo propósito, llegan a un país que no es el suyo.

Segundo: Los gobiernos no deberán permitir la salida de un emigrante sin que previamente, y con su intervención, se hayan celebrado los siguientes contratos:

- a) un contrato de transporte que garantice al emigrante su conducción hasta el lugar de utilización de sus servicios, en buenas condiciones de higiene, alimentación y comodidad adecuada;
- b) un contrato de trabajo que garantice al mismo emigrante, la utilización de sus servicios en las condiciones que se estipulen y, especialmente, el pago de su regreso hasta el lugar en que se haya celebrada el contrato.

Los gobiernos, además de las garantías estipuladas, deben dictar las medidas de protección necesarias en favor del emigrante, hasta el puerto de entrada del país al que emigra; y en favor del inmigrante desde el puerto de entrada hasta el lugar que fije su contrato de trabajo.

Tercero: El inmigrante deberá gozar de los mismos derechos y garantías legales que el residente en el país al cual emigra, con excepción de los derechos políticos que cada nación otorgue a sus nacionales, sin que jamás puedan dictarse medidas de cualquiera naturaleza, que tiendan a colocar al inmigrante en situación legal o de hecho inferior a la de los nacionales.

from other continents into their territories, adjusting their procedures to their economic, political and social interests.

4. That without prejudgment there should be recommended to the Second International Conference on Emigration and Immigration, for special study, the following proposition formulated by the delegation of Mexico:

First: For the purpose of the protection of the respective laws, only those who without personal funds leave their country to work in another at industrial, commercial, agricultural, or intellectual labors in the employ of an individual or an enterprise shall be considered as emigrants and as immigrants those who under equal conditions and for the same purpose arrive at a country not their own.

Second: The Governments should not permit the departure of an emigrant unless previously, and with its intervention, the following contracts have been celebrated:

- a) A transportation contract which guarantees to the emigrant his transportation to the point where his service will be utilized under good conditions of hygiene and alimentation and adequate comfort;
- b) A labor contract which guarantees to the same emigrant the utilization of his services under the conditions to be stipulated and, especially, the payment of his return passage to the place where the contract was effected.

The governments, in addition to the guarantees stipulated, should dictate the necessary protective measures in favor of the emigrant until he reaches the port of entry of the country to which he migrates; and in favor of the immigrant from the port of entry to the place established in his labor contract.

Third: The immigrant should enjoy the same legal rights and guarantees as the resident in the country to which he migrates, with the exception of the political rights which each nation grants its nationals, without it being possible ever to dictate measures of any kind which tend to place the immigrant in a situation legally or in fact inferior to that of the nationals.

El gobierno del país al que llegue el emigrante deberá hacer cumplir, por los medios que establezcan sus leyes, los contratos de transporte y de trabajo a que se refiere el punto segundo, cuando así lo solicite el emigrante.

5. Que sin prejuzgar se recomienda al Consejo Directivo de la Unión Panamericana, incluya como tema de la próxima Conferencia Internacional Americana, y prepare, entretanto se celebre la conferencia, el material necesario para la mejor consideración del problema la siguiente iniciativa de la delegación de El Salvador:

Ninguno de los estados americanos puede poner trabas a la emigración e inmigración de los otros estados americanos ni limitarla a determinado número de ciudadanos de otro estado americano.

DECLARACIÓN DE LA DELEGACIÓN DE LOS ESTADOS UNIDOS DE AMÉRICA

La delegación de los Estados Unidos desea manifestar, en relación con esta resolución, que el Gobierno de los Estados Unidos considera que el control de inmigración es un asunto puramente interior, representando el ejercicio de un derecho soberano y que, en lo que respecta a los Estados Unidos, la autoridad de su Congreso en materia de inmigración es exclusiva.

DECLARACIÓN DEL DELEGADO DE CUBA, DOCTOR HERNÁNDEZ CARTAYA

El que suscribe, desea hacer constar que, como ampliación de la reserva que dejó formulada al suscribir el dictamen de la subcomisión designada para conciliar los distintos criterios sobre el tema de la inmigración, expone que no acepta de ese dictamen los particulares contenidos bajo los números 1, 2 y 3 del mismo, y en su lugar formula, como recomendación del exponente, la segunda conclusión reformada de su ponencia sobre ese tema, que a la letra dice:

When the emigrant so requests, the Government of the country to which the emigrant arrives should enforce the fulfillment, through the means which its laws may establish, of the transportation and labor contracts to which the second paragraph refers.

5. That without prejudgment, it is recommended to the Governing Board of the Pan American Union that it include as a subject for the coming International Conference of American States, and that it prepare, pending the holding of that conference, the necessary material for the best consideration of the problem involved in the following proposal of the delegation of Salvador:

No one of the American states may place obstacles in the way of the emigration and immigration of the other American states nor limit it to a determined number of citizens of another American state.

DECLARATION OF THE DELEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

The delegation of the United States desires, in connection with this resolution, to state that the Government of the United States considers that the control of immigration is a matter of purely domestic concern, representing the exercise of a sovereign right, and that, as far as the United States of America is concerned, the authority of its Congress in immigration matters is exclusive.

DECLARATION OF THE DELEGATE OF CUBA, DOCTOR HERNÁNDEZ CARTAYA

The undersigned wishes to go on record to the effect that as an amplification of the reservation made by him when subscribing to the report of the subcommittee appointed to conciliate the different viewpoints on the subject of immigration, he states that he does not accept in that report the items contained under numbers 1, 2, and 3 of the same, and in their stead he formulates, as a recommendation of the reporter, the modified second conclusion of his report on this subject, which reads:

Segunda: Que, no obstante, se expresen como deseos de la actual Conferencia Internacional Americana, que en los próximos acuerdos se propenda al perfeccionamiento de la protección de los inmigrantes, en los órdenes jurídico y social, inspirándose en el principio de la igualdad civil de nacionales y extranjeros; que se llegue a bases que vigoricen la organización de las corrientes migratorias, teniéndose en cuenta las diversas necesidades nacionales y la soberanía de los países de inmigración, que se considera como principio fundamental, y que se tienda, por los medios adecuados a fijar los extremos que, por su naturaleza, deban recomendarse, por ahora a la concertación de pactos bilaterales, para evolucionar en el derecho internacional de este trascendental fenómeno.

DECLARACIÓN DE LA DELEGACIÓN DE LA REPÚBLICA DOMINICANA

Antes de emitir su voto sobre la resolución relativa al tema de "aspectos internacionales de los problemas de inmigración", la delegación dominicana desea reiterar, para que conste en acta, las observaciones formuladas por ella al tratarse este mismo tema en la comisión correspondiente.

No obstante el criterio sustentado por esta delegación de que estos problemas, en sus aspectos concretos, entran en el dominio privado de la legislación doméstica, no vió inconveniente en impartir su aprobación a la enunciación de principios y declaraciones contenidas bajo los números 1, 2 y 3 de la resolución, por considerar que dicha enunciación no tenía por objeto y fin primordial poner límite a la obra de la Conferencia Internacional de Emigración e Inmigración que se reunirá en esta ciudad próximamente, sino con el propósito de exponer los puntos de vista de las naciones americanas reunidas en esta Sexta Conferencia, y esos puntos de vista coinciden con el espíritu y las disposiciones positivas de la legislación dominicana.

El principio consignado en el número 1, proclama la soberanía del

Second: That it be nevertheless expressed, as the wish of the present International Conference of American States, that in future agreements the protection of immigrants, in both the juridical and the social order, be sought under the inspiration of the principle of civil equality among nationals and foreigners; that bases be devised upon which the organization of migratory currents may be strengthened, due consideration being given to the varied needs and the sovereignty of immigration countries, which sovereignty is deemed to be a fundamental principle; that through all adequate means efforts be made to fix the points which, because of their nature, should be recommended for the present in the making of bilateral agreements, to develop the application of international law to this transcendental problem.

DECLARATION OF THE DELEGATION OF THE DOMINICAN REPUBLIC

Before casting its vote on the resolution relating to the subject of "International Aspects of Immigration Problems", the Dominican delegation wishes to reiterate, in order that they may appear in the minutes, the observations formulated by it when dealing with this subject in the corresponding committee.

In spite of the opinion held by this delegation that these problems, in their concrete aspects, fall within the private domain of domestic legislation, it did not find it inconvenient to give its approval to the enunciation of principles and statements contained under numbers 1, 2, and 3 of the resolution, as it considered that the said enunciation did not have as its object and principal purpose the placing of a limitation on the work of the International Conference on Emigration and Immigration that will convene in this city in the near future, but was made for the purpose of proclaiming the viewpoints of the American nations assembled in this Sixth Conference, which viewpoints coincide with the spirit and the positive dispositions of Dominican legislation.

The principle incorporated in number 1 proclaims the sovereignty of the estado que recibe la inmigración, a cuya legislación y jurisdicción debe estar sujeto el inmigrante.

El principio de la igualdad de derechos civiles entre nacionales y extranjeros inspira toda la legislación dominicana. Sin embargo, debo reiterar aquí las reservas hechas en la Comisión de Asuntos Económicos. El legislador dominicano, con el propósito, no de restringir ese principio, sino de asegurar su aplicación en beneficio de los dominicanos residentes en el extranjero y de tomar algunas precauciones que se han juzgado necesarias, ha subordinado el goce o ejercicio de ciertos derechos civiles por parte de los extranjeros, a la condición de la reciprocidad legislativa, o del beneficio de un tratado o del hecho de que el extranjero haya sido autorizado a fijar su domicilio en el territorio de la República.

El principio consignado en el apartado "b" de la disposición número 2, no sólo es un punto de vista actual dominicano, sino que ha sido consagrado en nuestra Constitución como atributo inherente a la personalidad humana, y por tanto justifica plenamente nuestra más absoluta adhesión.

En cuanto al principio consignado en el número 3, me permito sugerir una pequeña modificación en el texto, para hacer sus disposiciones más claras. Propongo que se redacte así:

3. Que los estados americanos se reservan el derecho de examinar las ventajas de la entrada de la corriente inmigratoria en sus territorios, proveniente de otros territorios, y ajustar su modo de proceder a sus intereses económicos, políticos y sociales.

state receiving immigration, to whose legislation and jurisdiction the immigrant must be subject.

The principle of equality of civil rights among nationals and foreigners inspires all Dominican legislation. However, the delegation must reiterate here the reservations made in the Committee on Economic Problems. The Dominican legislator, desiring not to restrict this principle but to assure its application for the benefit of the Dominicans residing abroad, and of taking certain precautions which have been deemed necessary, has subordinated the enjoyment or exercise of certain civil rights by foreigners to the condition of legislative reciprocity, or the benefits of a treaty, or the fact that the foreigner may have been authorized to establish his domicile in the territory of the Republic.

The principle stated in section "b" of provision number 2 is not only a present Dominican viewpoint but has also been consecrated in our Constitution as an inherent attribute of human personality, and therefore fully justifies our most absolute adherence.

In reference to the principle stated in number 3, I take the liberty to suggest a slight modification in the text, to make its provisions clearer. I propose that it should be drawn thus:

3. That the American states shall reserve the right to examine the advantages of the entry of the immigration current coming from other territories into their own territories, and adjust their procedure to their economic, political, and social interests.

APPENDIX 73

RESOLUTION

[FUTURE CODIFICATION OF INTERNATIONAL LAW]

The Sixth International Conference of American States,

RESOLVES:

1. That the future formulation of international law shall be effected by means of technical preparation, duly organized, with the cooperation of the committees on investigation and international coordination and of the scientific institutes hereinafter mentioned.

2. That the International Commission of Jurists of Rio de Janeiro shall meet on the dates which may be appointed by the respective governments, for the purpose of undertaking the codification of public and private international law, the Pan American Union being entrusted with furthering the agreement necessary to bring about its meeting.

3. That three permanent committees shall be organized, one in Rio de Janeiro, for the work relating to public international law; another at Montevideo, for the work dealing with private international law; and another in Habana, for the study of comparative legislation and uniformity of legislations. Said bodies shall have the following functions:

a) To present to the governments a report or statement of the matters which are ready for codification and legislative uniformity comprising those definitely subject to regulation and formulation, as well as those regarding which international experience and the new principles and aspirations of justice may indicate require prudent juridical development.

This report would be presented for the purpose of having the governments indicate which matters they deem susceptible to study to the end that they may be used as a basis in the formulation of conventional rules or fundamental declarations.

b) Clasificar, con vista del citado cuadro y de las respuestas de los gobiernos, las materias de que se trata, en esta forma: 1) Materias que están en condiciones de codificación por reunir el consentimiento unánime de los gobiernos; 2) Materias susceptibles de ser promovidas como codificables por reunir la opinión no unánime pero predominante de los gobiernos; 3) Materias respecto de las cuales no existe opinión dominante para una regulación inmediata.

c) Presentar a los gobiernos la anterior clasificación a fin de obtener de ellos sus ideas generales sobre la manera, cómo podrían ser planteados y resueltos los problemas jurídicos de las materias codificables, así como todas las informaciones y antecedentes jurídicos, legales, políticos, diplomáticos y de cualquier otro orden que conduzcan a un completo esclarecimiento.

d) Solicitar y obtener de las sociedades nacionales de derecho internacional, su opinión científica y sus puntos de vista generales, sobre la regulación y formulación de las cuestiones jurídicas que sean objeto de los comités.

e) Organizar todo el material anterior y remitirlo con formulación de los primeros anteproyectos a la Unión Panamericana, la que los someterá al examen científico del consejo directivo del Instituto Americano de Derecho Internacional para que rinda un estudio técnico de tales anteproyectos y presente conclusiones y fórmulas, debidamente explicadas, en un informe sobre la materia.

4. Asimismo se oír el parecer de la Alta Comisión Interamericana, en aquellas materias económicas, financieras y marítimas, en concepto de cuerpo técnico de cooperación.

5. Presentados los estudios y las fórmulas mencionadas, se pondrán en conocimiento de los gobiernos, quienes podrán acordar la reunión de la Comisión de Jurisconsultos, si lo creyeren conveniente o la inclusión de ellos en el programa de una próxima Conferencia Internacional.

b) To classify, in view of the aforementioned statement and of the answers given by the governments, the matters submitted to discussion, in the following form: (1) Subjects which are in proper condition for codification, because they have been unanimously consented to by the governments; (2) Matters susceptible of being proposed as subject to codification because, although not unanimously endorsed by, they represent a predominant opinion on the part of most governments; (3) Matters respecting which there is no predominant opinion, in favor of immediate regulation.

c) To present to the governments the foregoing classifications, in order to learn their general views as to the manner in which the juridical problems of codifiable matters could be enunciated and resolved, together with all juridical, legal, political, and diplomatic data and antecedents which may lead to a full clarification of the subject.

d) To solicit and obtain from the national societies of international law scientific opinions and general views on the regulation and formulation of the juridical questions entrusted to the committees.

e) To compile all the aforementioned material for its transmission, together with draft-projects thereon, to the Pan American Union, which shall submit them to the executive council of the American Institute of International Law to the end that through a scientific consideration thereof the latter may make a technical study of such draft-projects and present its findings and formulas, in a report on the matter.

4. That the opinion of the Inter American High Commission shall likewise be heard, as that of a technical cooperative body, on those matters of an economic, financial and maritime nature.

5. That after said studies and formulas are presented, they shall be communicated to the governments, which may agree upon the advisability of convening the Commission of Jurists, or else have them incorporated into the program of a forthcoming International Conference.

6. Para incluir en el programa de las Conferencias Internacionales Americanas, las materias susceptibles de codificación o de uniformidad legislativa, así como para incluirlas en el programa de los trabajos de la Comisión de Jurisconsultos, en el caso que así se acordare, será necesario que los gobiernos hayan conocido los anteproyectos y antecedentes mencionados, por lo menos, con un año de anticipación.

7. Los tres comités anteriormente mencionados, serán formados por los gobiernos con miembros de las respectivas sociedades nacionales de derecho internacional. Se comunicarán con los gobiernos y con el consejo directivo del instituto, por medio de la Unión Panamericana.

8. Cuando ello fuere considerado oportuno podrá constituirse una Comisión de Jurisconsultos, versados en las legislaciones civiles de los países de América, a fin de que procedan al estudio de dichas legislaciones y redacten un proyecto de legislación civil uniforme para los países de América, especialmente de la América Latina, escogiendo los medios para obviar los inconvenientes que resultan de la diversidad de legislaciones.

9. La Unión Panamericana, en cuanto lo permitan sus estatutos cooperará en los trabajos preparatorios a que se refieren los artículos anteriores.

6. That in order to include in the program of the International Conferences of American States the matters susceptible of codification or uniformity of legislation, and also for their incorporation into the agenda of the Commission of Jurists, whenever agreed upon, it shall be necessary that the governments have the draft-projects and antecedents for study at least one year in advance.

7. That the three aforementioned committees shall be constituted by the governments with members of the respective national societies of international law. Communication with the governments and with the executive council of the institute shall be conducted through the Pan American Union.

8. That a Commission of Jurists, learned in the civil legislation of the American countries, may be constituted whenever deemed advisable, in order to undertake the study of said legislation and the drafting of a project of uniform civil legislation for the American nations, especially those of Latin America, choosing the proper means to obviate the inconveniences resulting from the diversity of legislations.

9. That the Pan American Union, in so far as its statutes may permit, shall cooperate in the preparatory work to which the foregoing articles refer.
